

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes totalting $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or what-ever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service

North of town in Lake County

Village seeks to press fight on Buffalo Grove annex

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling officials said Friday they will seek legal grounds to object to a proposed Buffalo Grove annexation in Lake County that will cut off village expansion to the north.

The proposed annexation of 85 acres north of the Chevy Chase Country Club would extend Buffalo Grove about two miles from Wheeling's northern boundary east of Milwaukee Avenue.

Wheeling trustees contacted about the annexation said they would like to oppose the move if they have legal grounds to do so. All four said they will seek a legal opinion from the village attorney.

"IT SUITS IS a sudden jolt," said Trustee Al Lang. "I would like to oppose their annexation if we have a legal foot to stand on. I would not be real happy about being cut off that way. This would really surround us."

Trustee John Koepfen explained that Wheeling's expansion has already been blocked in most directions. "We can't go west because of Buffalo Grove, and with the anticipated incorporation of Prospect Heights, our only growth would be to the north," he said. "If they come around to the north, we're just tied in." Wheeling is blocked on the east by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Wheeling officials will have to decide their course of action shortly since the petition for annexation is expected to be filed within the next two weeks. The Centex Homes Corp. is planning a townhouse and condominium development on the site.

Trustee Bill Hein said Wheeling may be able to oppose Buffalo Grove's expansion on grounds that it is strip annexation. "I'd like to check into the legality as far as strip annexation," he said. "It puts it right straight across our northern boundary, and it also looks like they're trying to get access to Lake-Cook Road as well as Chevy Chase itself."

ALTHOUGH WHEELING officials have long expressed interest in expanding into Lake County, the village failed to object this spring when Buffalo Grove made its first move east along Wheeling's northern boundary.

In that annexation, Buffalo Grove obtained 185 acres along the Lake-Cook County line, connected to the village by a narrow corridor of land. At the time, Wheeling officials expressed concern that village expansion would be blocked, but never filed any formal objection to the annexation.

Now Buffalo Grove is using that unopposed annexation to expand further eastward along Wheeling's northern boundary. Originally Centex proposed keeping its project in unincorporated Lake County, but decided to annex to Buffalo Grove after that village said it would file a protest to the development. In their objection, Buffalo Grove officials said they thought their village could do a better job of providing utilities and other services to the development.

Hein said he could not "figure why Buffalo Grove is coming this way rather than going straight north. Koepfen, however, said he could see Buffalo Grove's point. "They're taking the corridors where they can get them," he said.

Of the Wheeling officials contacted, only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said he was not concerned about the proposed annexation. He said he was not particularly interested in expanding into Lake County.

Trustees Don Jackson and Ed Berger were unavailable for comment.

In the past, village officials have said expansion northward might cause problems because Wheeling would then fall under the jurisdiction of two counties. For example, Wheeling would have to develop a new sanitary sewer system since the Metropolitan Sanitary District will not allow sewers from Lake County to connect into its system.

Lang, however, said such problems could be worked out if the village decided to move northward. "Evidently Buffalo Grove seems to be making out pretty well in two counties," he said.

Meanwhile, Wheeling is continuing to annex property in unincorporated Cook County. The village board tonight will consider a request to annex a large parcel of land on McHenry Road east of Cedar Run and west of Whippletree Village.

To concentrate on businesses and industries

United Fund hopes to raise $12,000

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund will kick off its annual fund-raising drive today with hopes of raising $12,000 this year.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said, however, the funds collected locally will only be part of the United Fund money used to support community groups. "That is our local goal," he said. "The campaign will be receiving back over $14,000 from the metropolitan campaign. So our total support to the community agencies will be over $26,000."

This year's goal is up $2,000 from last year's target of $10,000. Bauer said that although the campaign fell about $30 short of its goal last year, this year's goal is higher "because of the increasing need in the community."

BAUER SAID the campaign will concentrate on local business and industry this year, an area of the community not tapped in previous years. "We've got a more extensive campaign than we had in the past, especially in the industrial areas," he said.

According to Bauer, the campaign is also taking into consideration the fact that many residents now donate to the United Fund where they work. Several fund drives in other communities had trouble with their fund-raising last year because of people donating at work.

This year's drive, however, will continue to appeal to the area residents through an extensive letter campaign. Bauer said residents should begin receiving letters from the United Fund this week.

In addition, the United Fund is planning a McDonald's Day with the cooperation of the drive-in restaurant at 188 E. Dundee Road. Half of the proceeds from sales on Oct. 15 will be donated to the local campaign.

BAUER SAID his group is also considering a balloon sale later this fall, but plans are not yet definite. Thermometers will be posted in both Wheeling and Buffalo Grove to keep residents informed of the progress of this year's campaign.

Money raised by the United Fund will be used to support nine local agencies. Organizations receiving funds this year include Omm House-Youth Services Bureau, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, the Northwest Suburban Homemakers Service, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Northwest Mental Health Center and the Salvation Army Family Counseling Center.

"All the monies that are collected locally will stay locally," Bauer said. "Anything that we raise in the community will stay in the community."

THE UNITED FUND president added that most organizations supported by the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove group provide services for area youth.

"The major thrust that we feel we're providing this year is to the kids," he said.

Although this year's campaign officially begins today, Bauer said the drive will continue through the year until the goal is met.

Village to meet tonight on commission vacancies

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will begin preparing recommendations for filling the vacancies on village advisory commissions.

Since the process of appointing commissioners is expected to be lengthy, board members said they will begin by filling seats on the plan commission, zoning board, and police and fire commissions.

There have been openings on the plan commission and zoning board since Douglas Cargill vacated his seats on both more than a year and a half ago.

BOARD MEMBERS said the vacancy on the police and fire commission would also have priority because of upcoming tests for applicants for the village police and fire departments. Commission chairman Vern Nystrom is up for reappointment to the one vacant seat.

Trustee Al Lang said most of the persons applying for commission seats have requested a position on one of these three commissions. Most applicants for these commissions have been asked if they are willing to serve on other commissions.

For the past month, board members have been interviewing applicants and commissioners seeking reappointment. The final interview was concluded last week, and trustees were asked to prepare their list of recommendations to be discussed at a committee meeting at 6:45 tonight at the village hall. The discussion will be open to the public.

THE TRUSTEES also are expected to consider combining three village commissions into one commission to avoid problems of attendance and lack of activity experienced in the past. Trustee Ron Bruhn suggested combining the industrial, human relations and public relations commissions into a general relations commission as an alternative to disbanding these three boards.

Action on the proposal, however, has been delayed so that the board could interview those seeking commission seats.

Following the committee meeting, the board will meet in regular session to approve payments for work on village wells and to consider zoning and planning requests.

The board will also consider a petition for annexation and planned development zoning for property located on McHenry Road, east of Cedar Run and west of Whippletree Village.

The regular board meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Road.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2001 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be outmoded in a few years."

Municipal officials to select NIPC reps in November

Mayors and village presidents from all the municipalities in the six county metropolitan area will be called together early in November to elect five municipal officials to the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The assembly of mayors — which is required under new legislation that changed the structure of the NIPC — may be more than just a voting session, however, according to Jim Wahlman of NIPC's public service office.

"Schlickman thinks it will be a mini-convention on the region's problems," Wahlman said, referring to State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, who sponsored the legislation which restructured NIPC.

The 19-member commission is being expanded to 25 members. Among the new commissioners will be five elected officials from suburban municipalities — city aldermen, village trustees, elected municipal clerks and mayors or village presidents.

Only two of the five officials can be from any one of the six counties in the NIPC area — Cook, DuPage, Kane, Lake, McHenry and Will.

OTHER CHANGES in the commission structure under the new bill will include one commissioner who will represent the Metropolitan Sanitary District and one who will represent the Chicago Transit Authority.

The commission will also have increased representation from the Cook County Board with three county board commissioners appointed to serve rather than only one as in the past.

Wahlman points out that under the new structure almost two-thirds of the commission will be made up of elected officials as opposed to the old structure when only half of the commissioners held public office.

The November meeting will be the first to select the suburban representatives. Under the new legislation similar meetings will be held every four years.

Lottery should benefit state

which enables out-of-state residents to purchase lottery tickets by mail instead of traveling to Michigan.

THE MICHIGAN lottery is worked in a very simple way. Tickets at 50 cents each contain two sets of three-digit numbers, such as 123 and 456, for example. During the weekly drawing, if one of those two combinations comes up the ticket purchaser receives a $25 prize.

If both of these combinations come up, 123 and 456, the ticket holder does not win $25 but instead becomes eligible for the super drawing held a week later with prizes ranging from $10,000 to $50,000 to $200,000.

Each time the $25 winners number 120,000 persons, a Millionaire Drawing is held. One hundred twenty persons then become millionaire prize finalists. Each of these persons are guaranteed a $1,000 prize but only 10 will be eligible for the $1 million. After the $1 million is awarded, the next 120,000 winners of $25 will be eligible for another Millionaire Drawing. Five drawings have been held so far with the sixth scheduled for Tuesday morning.

All the major drawings take place in different cities across Michigan because of its popularity. Crowds sometimes in excess of 300 persons jam supermarkets, military armories, school auditoriums and elsewhere to see instant riches bestowed upon lucky participants.

Gas dealers warn public: 'You may be on horseback'

(From Herald News Services)

Gasoline dealers from 41 states paved the way Sunday for widespread station shutdowns and warned the public soon "may be on horseback" unless the freeze is lifted on retail gas prices.

The dealers also charged there is "a conspiracy between the Cost of Living Council and the major oil companies . . . to squeeze the independent operator out of business."

Charles Binsted, president of the National Congress of Petroleum Dealers, said the members decided at a meeting in Arlington Park Towers Hotel, Arlington Heights, they could no longer ask stations to remain open unless the government affords immediate price relief.

Instead, he said, they voted to leave the decision up to individual dealers.

"We have not said we would support a nationwide shutdown at this point, but we cannot be responsible for the irate dealers in this country," Binsted said. "We can no longer ask these people not to close down if it is economically impossible for them to stay open."

"If immediate action is not taken, the government's restrictions on us may result in a 20th Century version of the Boston Tea Party," said Binsted. "The public may be on horseback."

The Sunday meeting was the latest in a series of protests by gas dealers across the nation over economic guidelines that allow wholesale gas prices to rise but hold down retail prices.

• In Indianapolis, 300 service station owners voted to shutdown for six days beginning Sunday and meet again Friday to decide whether to continue their protest. The state police operations office said it was flooded with calls Sunday from stranded motorists.

• In the Lafayette, Ind., area 76 gasoline stations shut down today and will remain closed "until operators get financial relief from the Cost of Living Council."

• One-third of the dealers in Manchester, N. H., voted to shutdown Tuesday through Thursday.

• Independent service station dealers in the Baltimore and Washington metropolitan areas scheduled a one-day shutdown for today.

• In California, where many stations have been closed on Sunday, traffic was lighter than usual in metropolitan areas. On San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge, usually stacked with cars heading for autumn trips to the wine country, traffic was unusually light.

Meanwhile in Washington, Melvin R. Laird, the top White House domestic affairs advisor, said President Nixon now has a contingency plan for mandatory fuel allocation and might put it into effect if Congress did not act swiftly in the face of a serious supply shortage.

Laird said the contingency plan was on Nixon's desk and that it "may have to be implemented" as a replacement for the administration's current voluntary allocation program.

Administration sources said over the weekend that regulations for allocation of propane gas already had been issued.

The Senate has passed a mandatory fuel allocation plan and the House Commerce Committee scheduled hearings this week on the proposal because the Rules Committee would not let it go directly to the floor for debate. But Laird indicated that the administration might be deeply concerned about the need for speed in moving to deal with shortages that could develop this winter.

"It may be necessary to go forward with a program in this area and we may not be able to wait for action by the Congress," he said. "It would be good to have a partnership as we went into mandatory allocations, because it's not going to be an easy situation."

Mitchell Ware files libel suit

Mitchell Ware, Chicago's deputy police superintendent, seeks $10 million in damages from Cook County States Attorney Bernard Carey on grounds Carey told malicious lies about him in a news conference last week. Ware's libel suit drew an immediate reaction from Carey who said the deputy police chief "always had a flair for publicity gimmicks and I hope he uses this opportunity to tell how he cleaned up pockets of corruption in the police department."

Peron: older, mellower, still anti-U.S.

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron is a patient man. Thrown out of Argentina's presidency at the point of a gun, he waited 18 years to reconquer the country through the ballot box.

On Oct. 8, he will celebrate his 78th birthday. Although visited almost daily by a heart specialist, Peron is said to be in good shape for a man his age.

Age has not dimmed Peron's jaunty manner and broad smile, but he seems somewhat mellower than the man who ruled Argentina with an iron hand from 1946 to 1955.

He is aware that the years since his ouster have been marked by deep division in the country between his followers and opponents. Unity and moderation are themes he has stressed since returning to the country for the first time last Nov. 17.

Strident criticism of the United States was a feature of Peron's former period in power and remains part of his outlook. If anything, Peron is more strongly anti-American now than before.

Peron considers himself the originator of the "third position" of non-alignment between East and West. For him, this includes vigorous assertion of Argentina's independence from U.S. influence in Latin America.

Peron started his rise to power in 1943 as an army officer involved in a military coup. He became labor and welfare minister and later rose to war minister and vice president under the presidency of Gen. Edelmiro J. Farrell.

Seeing a threat in Peron's growing power base among the working class, Farrell had him arrested in October, 1945. Mass demonstrations by Peron's followers forced Farrell to restore Peron's freedom and he was elected president in February, 1946.

Peron's rule from 1946 to 1955 gave the Argentine worker a sense of well-being he had never known before. Workers got paid vacations and special resorts to spend them at, Christmas bonuses and other benefits.

A strong factor in Peron's mass appeal was his second wife, Eva Duarte, known as "Evita."

Her death from cancer in 1952 at the age of 33 converted her into the spiritual leader of the Peronist movement. Peron's efforts to have her declared a saint strained his relations with the Roman Catholic church and became one factor leading to his downfall.

Heavy-handed tactics with political opponents and the press, combined with deterioration of the Argentine economy, led to Peron's ouster by an army revolt Sept. 16, 1955.

Forced into exile, Peron wandered from Paraguay to Panama, Nicaragua, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic before settling in Spain in 1960. From a luxurious villa outside Madrid, he continued to guide his followers in Argentina.

Last year, President Alejandro Lanusse finally permitted Peron to return to Argentina, where he was received with wild enthusiasm. Peron was barred by a residency requirement from running in the March 11 presidential election this year, but his personal delegate, Hector Campora, got just under 50 per cent of the vote in a nine-man race and was declared the winner. Peronist candidates gained control of congress and the provincial governments.

After a period in Spain, Peron returned to Argentina again June 20. The subsequent resignation of Campora and his vice president opened the door to new elections and Peron's chance to return to power.

It's President Peron again

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron won a landslide victory Sunday night to regain the Argentine presidency from which he was ousted by a military coup in 1955.

Crowds of Peron supporters thronged the streets of Buenos Aires to celebrate the victory of their 77-year-old leader and his 40-year-old third wife Isabel who ran on the same ticket as vice presidential candidate.

Needing more than 50 per cent of the vote to avoid a runoff in the four-man race, Peron ran ahead of that figure from the start. After results were nearly complete from the capital and other urban centers of strength for his three opponents, Peron's total began to increase with votes from the provinces.

OFFICIAL RETURNS from 90 per cent of the polling places gave Peron and his Justicialist Liberation Front 6,617,004 votes or 60.66 per cent; Ricardo Balbin of the Radical Civic Union 24.98 per cent;

Francisco Manrique of a center-right coalition 12.63 per cent; and Juan Corral of the Socialist Workers party 1.68 per cent.

A crowd of well-wishers gathered outside the official presidential residence in the Buenos Aires suburb of Olivos, where Peron had gone from his private home to await the results. Current occupant of the residence is Raul A. Lastiri, head of the lower house of Congress acting as provisional president until inauguration of the new executive Oct. 12.

Carloads of happy Peronists rode around the Plaza de Mayo in the center of Buenos Aires honking horns and chanting slogans, while several thousand celebrants on foot milled in the Plaza, scene of great rallies when Peron was in power from 1946 to 1955.

While the voting was under way, Peron took a calm view of the whole matter. "I'm so used to these things that I don't feel anything," he told reporters. "There's no emotion in it for me — I don't get sad or happy."

Superdose vitamin A, D sales boom prior to Oct. 1 cut-off by United Press International

Barring last-minute court intervention, this is the last week Americans will be able to buy high-concentration doses of vitamin A or vitamin D without a prescription.

By at least one account, sales of those two vitamins in superdose sizes are booming in advance of the Oct. 1 cut-off.

Under the ban imposed by the Food and Drug Administration, a doctor's prescription will be needed to buy vitamin A in single doses above 10,000 international units and vitamin D in one-pill doses greater than 400 international units.

The FDA said excessive amounts of the two vitamins are "clearly dangerous," without a doctor's supervision. Too much vitamin A, it said, could lead to pressure on the brain with tumor-like symptoms, and too much vitamin D could cause retarded mental and physical growth in children.

THE TWO vitamins still will be available in weaker doses after Oct. 1 and there is no prohibition on swallowing as many of those pills as desired to try to duplicate the stronger tablets.

Since the FDA made the rules final Aug. 1, along with other more sweeping vitamin controls that will not take effect until the end of next year, at least 10 lawsuits have been filed by health food stores and other interested parties to block the action.

Stennis firmly opposed to reviving the draft

(From Herald News Services)

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., one of the few in Congress who resisted the rush to an all-volunteer Army, served notice Sunday he would not consider any legislation to restore the draft for at least two years.

Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also suggested that the Pentagon go out and recruit "young girls" for noncombat posts.

"I have no patience for those in the military uniform two years ago who were beating the drums for the all-volunteer concept, and who are now saying it won't work," Stennis said in a speech prepared for delivery in the Senate today. "The facts are that the plan hasn't been sufficiently tried, not by any means."

Enlistments since the draft expired last June 30 have been disappointing and some Pentagon manpower experts feel it may have to be restored soon.

Stennis said he would support "all reasonable measures" to make the volunteer Army work, but that he firmly opposed any move to revive the draft "for at least two more years."

As for stepping up recruiting of women, Stennis said "They are an abundant source of talent and more extensive experiments of their use should be made," he added.

ELSEWHERE ON Capitol Hill Sunday, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he hoped close to $6 billion could be cut out of the $21.9 billion military procurement bill now on the Senate floor.

Mansfield's comments came just one day after the White House disclosed that President Nixon had written him, Senate GOP Leader Hugh Scott and Stennis to appeal for Senate approval of the full weapons budget requested by the administration.

The Senate planned to resume debate on the procurement bill today, with some members expected to push hard for sharp reductions, especially in spending authorizations for the controversial Trident missile submarine program.

"Too much has been spent on too many exotic weapons," said Mansfield. Meanwhile, House Speaker Carl Albert, defending his fellow Democrats' legislative record in Congress, said Sunday President Nixon's recent claims of inaction on some of his key proposals were "feeble attempts to disguise the administration's own glaring failures."

'Baffletalk' the bane of religious conventions.

"The classic heresy of the 20th Century is that truth will invariably emerge from dialogue," contends the periodical of the English Dioceses of Peterborough.

Nowhere is this better illustrated than at the national religious conventions, where the language utilized by some of the more experienced delegates (and group dynamics hustlers) is wondrous almost to the point of being occult.

Such esoteric linguistics have been described as "Baffletalk" by Emily Louise Conrad, in an article written for Eternity magazine.

Rev. Lester Kinsolving

"BAFFLETALK" is easily mastered, she explains. She lists three columns of nine numbered words that are frequently used by speakers at religious conventions — such as:

- 1) indigenous, 2) incremental, 3) nor-

Public meeting for AA Wednesday

The Northwest Friendship Group of Alcoholics Anonymous will hold a public meeting Wednesday for those interested in the problems of alcoholism and learning how Alcoholics Anonymous can help.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church, 1903 E. Euclid, Arlington Heights.

Speakers include Donald W. Sellers, a staff psychiatrist at Lutheran General Hospital, who will present, "A Psychiatrist Looks at Alcoholism," a member of Alcoholics Anonymous and a member of Al-Anon, an organization for families of alcoholics.

mative, 4) contextual, 5) optimal, 6) viable, 7) infrastructure, etc. etc. etc.

"Now choose a three-digit number — your area code, or the last of your zip code will do nicely," she directs, in order to make a random selection of the numbered words.

The result, if memorized, can dazzle an entire convention, enabling the greenest freshman delegate to achieve immediate national recognition by taking the floor to inform the assemblage:

"What we really need in dealing with this issue in multidimensional, determinative involvement!"

IN SHORT ORDER this technique can enable one to move up to the forensic major league, where one can be a star by calling for:

"Action-oriented orchestration of innovative inputs that can maximize the vital thrust towards a nonalienated infrastructure."

If, despite such verbal snowstorms, the convention seems to be on the verge of actually accomplishing something specific (which one opposes it is time to shift immediately into verbiage that is wonderfully simple and simply wonderful — but no less lethal to any and all progress.

An example of this is provided in a brief article which was sent to this writer, which has neither author's name nor publication — but which is entitled "How To Avoid Action":

• For every proposal set up an opposite and then "concede" to a "middle ground" (no action at all).

• Profess not to have the answer. (This lets you out of having any answer at all) — while earnestly cautioning against proceeding too rapidly (which helps avoid ever getting started).

• Emphasize righteously that, "This problem cannot be separated from other related problems." (Translation: We can't solve this problem until we have solved all related problems — which means never.)

• Ask what is meant by the question. (By the time this is explained to the satisfaction of even a small minority, it is time to go home.)

• Earnestly caution the gathering that "We had better wait until we can consult an expert!" or, as an equally effective action-stopper: "Let's appoint a committee!"

• In closing, be sure to congratulate the problem. "It has stimulated discussion, contributed to growth, opened new vistas and shown us the way." (We may have wasted two perfectly good hours, but that problem surely deserves a medal.)

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers. SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Linton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Her very own leather-goods shop in Long Grove

It's a dream come true... what more need be said?

by REGINA ORHLER

Marta Vaenberg had a dream. Like her father before her, she wanted independence, a business of her own.

So the Argentine immigrant sewed from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day for 10½ years, saving her money. Her eyes grew weaker and her children grew older.

Finally, last month a dream came true and Mrs. Vaenberg, 33, opened a small

And every day at 4 p.m. her husband, Gregorio, takes charge of the shop, Bon Voyage, and she goes home to fix dinner and act as the housewife.

"I HAVE A Spanish education," Mrs. Vaenberg said. "First comes the home, husband and children."

But with a $10,000 investment, Mrs. Vaenberg left the security of an established, if small, sewing and alterations business in the confines of her home to realize a dream.

"If I don't do it, in the back of my mind, I am a failure," she said. This way, she explained with what she calls "mine funny accent," if she fails, she will at least have tried.

"It was a big risk, and I have many sleepless nights," she said, adding that her husband encouraged her. "He's an optimist."

HER FIRST goal was to open a small dress shop. "But if I open a fashion shop, I know I would start sewing again," she said. Because her eyes were becoming increasingly worse, she opened a leather shop.

"I love the smell of leather," she said. And spending ten hours in the shop doesn't tire her out as much as six hours of sewing did, she added. "I was very tired of sewing."

Two years after making the decision and waiting for the right shop, she found a place. Mrs. Vaenberg said that when she and her husband saw the store, they weren't even looking for a place. They had just stopped for a cup of coffee.

Two days later, they rented the store and started buying. Most of the furnishings, except for two glass cases, were made by her husband.

"WE WERE trying to save a little money," she said. Gregorio, Vaenberg, whose professional name is Ross, works with wood as a hobby, making pictures and furniture.

Along part of the back wall is a high priced selection of original wood pictures and trays. Mrs. Vaenberg said her husband has stopped making the pictures, and she really doesn't want to sell the items. "I wanted to use them mostly for decoration," she said.

THE BEGINNING was a little rough, she admits. Everything had to be prepaid in cash. She said retailers have started giving her credit. Now she can order by phone and has thirty days to pay and "things are going perfect."

In buying, she uses instinct. "I don't care what they tell me, I know what I want," she said. "Until now, I sell everything that I bought."

A Sears, Roebuck and Co. warehouse and retail store, as large as the Woodfield Shopping Mall, is planned for Elk Grove Village.

The two million square foot building would be constructed on the southeast corner of the Devon Avenue-Busse road intersection. Sears reportedly has purchased the 90 acre site and plans to start construction by next spring.

The warehouse would be built in three phases, over about 10 years. The first phase, if construction started in the would be finished by early 1975.

BEFORE STARTING work, Sears wants a commitment from the village that Pan-Am Boulevard will not be extended west across Busse Road and into the Elk Grove Industrial Park. In an extremely short-notice demands, Sears told the village last week that if the commitment not to extend Pan-Am was not received by this week, the company will abandon the project and locate elsewhere.

An extension of Pan-Am Boulevard would run through the proposed Sears building.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis has recommended the village drop its plan to extend the boulevard. He presented his recommendation to the village plan commission as its meeting Thursday.

Willis said Pan-Am apparently will not be extended between Busse Road and York-Elnhurst Road, even if Sears did not build, because ownership disputes of certain land parcels prevent the village from obtaining necessary right-of-way.

He said the industrial uses near Pan-Am Boulevard have no desire to extend the road because it now adequately serves their needs.

THE PLAN commission was notified of Sears' request as a "courtesy," said Willis.

He said the site is now zoned for warehouse construction and a building permit could be issued without consulting the commission.

The board of trustees would have to give Sears the guarantee that Pan-Am Boulevard would not be extended.

THE PLAN COMMISSIONERS objected to the short notice given by Sears for a decision on Pan-Am Boulevard and said they would have liked to have had more time to study the project, especially the impact on traffic congestion.

Willis described the warehouse as completely automated, using computers and conveyor belts to transport merchandise. Although the building would employ an estimated 2,000 workers very few would be involved with physical moving of goods.

The warehouse would serve as the company's national distribution point for all clothing items.

The retail sales portion of the building would cover 35,000 square feet.

Willis said property taxes the village would gain from the building would be "enormous." Additional tax revenue would also be generated from the sales tax on retail sales.

John Marshall, fourth chief justice of the United States, was born Sept. 24, 1755.

On this day in history: In 1955, President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered a heart attack while vacationing in Colorado.

In 1959, President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev met at Camp David, Md.

In 1971, retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black died at the age of 85.

In 1972, a private jet plane crashed into a Sacramento, Calif., ice cream parlor, killing 22 persons, most of them youngsters.

A thought for the day: President Eisenhower said, "In the final choice, a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chains."

Check your $20s...

Two bogus $20 bills were passed recently at Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank, 4 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

The two bills, both series 1968A, were similar to phony $20 bills found in Highland Park and Glenview. Discovery of the bills was Tuesday.

Wheeling police have given their information to federal authorities.

Parks approve land purchase

The Wheeling Park District has approved the purchase of a 2.4-acre park site off Valley Stream Drive contingent on the district's getting a state grant for the purchase.

The site is the first new property purchased by the district with funds from last December's park improvements referendum. The parcel will cost the park district $32,500.

Park board members are also planning to join with area park districts to once again ask the Wheeling Township Board for a portion of its federal revenue sharing funds. Earlier this year, the township turned down a similar request, saying park districts were not eligible for revenue sharing money.

The state, however, recently passed legislation allowing townships to give revenue sharing funds to park districts. Park board members said this legislation would give them a legal basis for their request.

Installation-damaged land to be restored

Parkways, driveways and curbs damaged in July, while connecting the village with the new sewage treatment plant in Lake County, will be restored this fall, officials said recently.

The area in front of several homes on Farrington Drive was torn up to install an interceptor sewer. The sewer intercepts sewage which formerly went to the village's treatment plant on Farrington Drive and diverts it to the new plant on Pekara Drive near Milwaukee Avenue in unincorporated Vernon Township.

When the Lake County plant was opened the village's was closed.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said the sidewalks in the area have already been replaced. Officials said the work was not done immediately because the ground needed time to settle before concrete could be poured. The same holds true with planting of grass, the officials said.

All driveways, lawns and curbs that have been damaged will be restored to its original condition, Larson said. He said lawns that were sodded, will be re-sodded, while homes with lawns planted from seed will be reseeded.

School building additions bids to be opened

The Dist. 21 school board will open bids for $1.8 million in building additions to the district's three junior high schools at a special meeting tomorrow night.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at London Junior High School, 1001 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Contracts for the work are expected to be awarded Thursday at the regular Dist. 21 school board meeting. Construction will probably begin in October.

The planned additions will increase the number of classrooms in each building as well as provide areas for a new vocational arts program.

Construction at Holmes will include the addition of a lunch room and at London Junior High, a library-learning center will be added. This will make the two schools equal to Cooper Junior High in facilities.

Dist. 21 Assistant Supt. John Barger has said the district hopes to begin construction about 30 days after the contracts are awarded. The work is scheduled to be completed in time for the new facilities to be used for the 1974-75 school year.

Man, 23, drowns in Lake Opeka

A Des Plaines man drowned early yesterday in Lake Opeka, Touhy and Lee streets.

Mark Cleveland, 23, of 2050 Pine Dr., was pronounced dead at Holy Family Hospital after his body was pulled from the lake by scuba divers.

Two fishermen saw Cleveland walk into the lake shortly before 6:30 a.m. Sunday. After seeing him surface several times and then go under, they called the Des Plaines Fire Department.

Firefighters in boats searched the lake. They were assisted by diving teams from Rosemont, Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights, according to reports.

Two professional scuba divers, Ray Rasane, Melrose Park, and Brandt Burger, Chicago, were also called into the search. Rasane, a member of the Illinois Scuba Rescue and Recovery Club, and Burger, a scuba instructor at the Park Ridge YMCA, recovered the body at 9:15 a.m. in the exact spot the fishermen said Cleveland went down.

According to Des Plaines police, the body was taken to Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, where funeral arrangements will be made. A coroner's inquest will be held sometime this week, police said, but no foul play is suspected. Cleveland was married and had no children.

WINTER PANDA

by Marcie Course

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

His foot is in pain—and there's no easy solution

About four years ago I had a heart attack. Since then I have gradually initiated a swimming program and now swim about one and a half hours, four days a week. Rarely, I have chest pain and take small glycerin pills for this, also I take Serpasil, vitamin C, other vitamins and minerals.

My main problem is intermittent pain in the soles of my feet which is excruciating. It is the kind of stinging pain you sustain after distance running. In addition to heart specialists, I have seen two internists, two orthopods, two podiatrists and two neurologists. One of the latter said it was in my head. It's not, it's in my feet. I have no abnormal chemistries and my pulsations are good, but I do have a hell of a lot of intermittent pain. What can I do?

Your problem obviously has no easy solution. There are some orthopedic problems involving the muscles and bone joints that might be a factor, but we'll assume on the basis of your examinations you don't have these. Vitamin deficiencies should not be a problem. This leaves the most likely cause to be involvement of the peripheral nerves that go to the soles of the feet.

On the list of things to do, you should be examined carefully for diabetes, and this means more than a fasting blood sugar, which can be normal in a person with mild diabetes. You should have a glucose tolerance test done. It's possible that diabetes may be affecting your peripheral nerves and causing this trouble, even though you might not have an obvious or severe case of diabetes.

Another disease problem which is extremely rare, but should be looked for, is the possibility of amyloidosis, a muscle biopsy needs to be done to see if you might have this. This is very rare and not likely.

If no underlying disease such as diabetic neuropathy can be found, then I would suspect that the most likely cause is entrapment of the nerves to the feet. Although you have been seen by a neurologist, not all neurologists regularly employ electrodiagnostic techniques.

To study the possibility of entrapment of the nerves to the bottom of your feet you need to have measurements of nerve conduction and "distal latency." These are done by placing electrodes on the feet and lower legs and measuring the time electrical impulses move along the nerves. If nerve entrapment can be diagnosed, then it can be approached surgically.

I KNOW HOW difficult it is to find someone for these types of problems, so I'll make a rare exception and suggest to you that if it becomes necessary to look for someone to study the possibility of nerve entrapment that you write to Dr. Ian McLean at Ohio State Medical Center, Columbus, Ohio, and ask for a recommendation for someone who can do these kinds of measurements in your area. I know I've put more technical terms in this letter than I usually do, but you will need them to go about unraveling the problem that you are faced with.

Finally, in a lighter vein, I'll have to say that if you have an excess amount of body weight you should get rid of it. I'm always reminded of one of my old friends who was overweight, and we used to remind him of this problem by asking him if his feet still hurt.

St. Viator gains two college courses

Harper College instructors are teaching two courses at St. Viator High School this year.

The courses, open to seniors, are college accounting, taught by Daniel Danis, and Introduction to psychology, taught by Charles Joly. Students who pass the courses receive Harper credit for their work.

Maryann Miller, director of community services at Harper, said that sending college personnel directly into high school classrooms is "a unique effort and speaks very highly of the educational preparation of St. Viator students."

St. Viator, a Catholic school for boys living in the Northwest suburbs, is located in Arlington Heights.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Jim: "Is it true that the Eastern bridge establishment didn't get around to using Blackwood until several years after it had swept the West?"

Oswald: "I was an Easterner then and we didn't take kindly to the idea that someone from Indiana would develop a better convention than we had. I am probably the first Easterner to start using it and I know I am the first oldtime expert to admit the existence of Easley Blackwood and his excellent convention."

Jim: "Knowing you, I also assume that you were the first man to start modifying it."

Oswald: "It may be so. The first Blackwood modification was to use the five-club response to show no aces or four aces. It seemed that anyone could tell which holding was being shown. It also seemed that when five clubs showed four aces there was room to ask for kings."

Jim: "Today's hand which I made up illustrated how this works. South checks for aces and finds that North holds all four. He checks for kings; finds North has the missing one and bids seven no-trump with surety of success."

Oswald: "They might get there without this modification but it was a cinch with it."

SEPT. 23rd TO SEPT. 29th IS NATIONAL DOG WEEK

SAVE $25 ON A PUPPY PALACE PROBLEM-FREE DOG.

This is National Dog Week. And we believe that nobody has more fun and adventure than puppies and people when you put them together. Now you can help us celebrate, get in on the fun and save $25 when you buy a Puppy Palace pup.

Good deal? Sure. Yet, this $25 saving is the least important reason to buy a pup at Puppy Palace. The most important reason is that Puppy Palace offers you the most problem-free pups ever.

Problem-free means a healthy, predictable purebred. Problem-free means the right dog for the right family. Problem-free means getting a pup into good habits—fast. Problem-free means he'll grow into a happy, obedient pet. Here's how Puppy Palace does it.

43 different breeds make it simpler to select the right pup for your family. Our trained "puppy experts" will help you select the right dog for your family. We have friendly, rugged breeds for families with hard-playing youngsters. Breeds that like exercise for families with lots of property. Even dogs that don't bark for folks with grouchy neighbors.

Purebreds from quality breeders
At Puppy Palace we offer only purebred dogs. They're predictable. And that's important.

Every pup you see in a Puppy Palace cage is a friend of our family. We know his parents. His grandparents. We can predict how big he'll grow. How he'll react under different conditions. His best traits. And his worst.

We don't just love you and leave you

Our job doesn't end when you bring your pup home. We want your puppy to stay healthy and happy even after you bring him home. And we're available to help you and your pup solve your problems.

Our healthy puppies live at least 10 years—or we'll help pay! Each pup at Puppy Palace undergoes an extensive health program. He's examined weekly by a veterinarian. He's fed a vitamin-enriched diet. He gets all his puppy shots. And he's kept in a spotless cage.

Is it any wonder we can promise "Any puppy you buy from Puppy Palace will live at least 10 years—or we'll contribute to the cost of replacing him with a new puppy from our store."

Free replacement the first 6 months
If you lose your puppy due to theft, accident or disease within 6 months of purchase, we'll replace him absolutely free with a puppy of equal value.

Constant source of ready help, expert advice

Our "puppy experts" are always available to help solve any routine problems in the life of your dog. They've been specially trained at our puppy school.

They'll give you literature and proven advice on feeding, grooming, house-breaking, training. We'll furnish you with information about raising and training your pup. You'll get bulletins on how to winterize and summerize your dog. How to keep him in good health. And more.

Visit your local Puppy Palace this weekend and save $25

Feel a couple of cold noses. Cuddle a few pups. Get your fingers licked. Play with a pup in one of our playrooms. Our puppy experts will be delighted to answer any questions about a particular dog, a special breed—or dogs in general.

Let us show you why Puppy Palace dogs are the most problem-free pups available today. Buy one and save $25. Come see us this weekend.

Herald editorial

Economic plans needed

Confidence in President Richard Nixon's stewardship of the economy has, if possible, dropped even lower.

The state of the economy has made it obvious for some time that his economic experts are confused and uncertain.

For more than two years, the administration has floundered — with phases, freezes and thaws; manipulation of federal money supply; trade stimulation followed by export restrictions; dollar fixings and floats in international exchange; and most recently, ill-conceived proposals for an income tax surcharge and Presidential control of business tax credit as "new" tools for controlling inflationary or recessionary cycles.

Phase III was a disaster. Everyone is confused, and no one is satisfied, by the government's complicated and inconsistent wage and price ceilings structure in Phase IV.

Meanwhile, the nation's economic ailments are increasing rather than abating.

Persistent and growing inflation has pushed consumer prices ever higher. And while the pace of wage increases has slowed appreciably, other increases have not slowed, thus placing more pressure on wage rates and adding even more uncertainty to an already cloudy economic outlook.

The increases in the cost of food and farm products are staggering. Although our total food bill is now running 9 per cent ahead of last year, every penny of the rise reflects higher prices — not a rise in food consumption.

Many economists are worried about a recession in 1974 — increasing unemployment but without any drop in prices.

The stock market remains depressed, and interest rates, already at their highest in history, keep rising.

The current mortgage crunch is working severe hardships on home buyers and sellers alike, and has prompted forecasts of a 50 per cent decline in housing production.

The nation now faces chronic shortages in raw materials and other basic necessities.

In the midst of this chaos, the only certain thing about government economic policy is its apparent absence. Confesses Arthur F. Burns, Federal Reserve Board chairman: "I must acknowledge that I see no easy way out of our current dilemma."

In effect, the President's economic advisers have admitted defeat and are telling us there is little hope for improvement.

Obviously, the nation cannot long endure the continued confusion and contradiction in economic policymaking by the White House. At a time when we need a sound, comprehensive strategy for repairing the economy, the President makes it evident the administration has no long-term plan for dealing with the current inflation or coming adversity.

Watergate and related scandals raised questions about the character and integrity of this administration. The muddled mess of the economy also makes us question its sanity.

Every sword has two edges. Lately, from news articles and features, the public has been dramatically informed of the tight mortgage market, high interest rates and charges, high prime rate and more. Yet no one has said, but on the other hand...

This deals with the "on the other hand..." First some background and facts:

1. There will probably not be an early end to the money crisis. Probably 3-6 months before easing of prime rate.
2. There is no basis to believe the interest rates on mortgages will drop to previous levels when money becomes more plentiful.
3. Mortgage rates outside the Illinois and Chicagoland area have been at or over 8 per cent for over a year in many areas. The national average three months ago was 7.9 per cent. The east and west coast areas have been considerably higher.

4. New safeguards tested did not operate as well as designed: secondary FNMA mortgage market, Federal Home Loan bank and open market sales through Savings and Loans.

5. In order to get more mortgage money in Illinois, the state legislature will probably take the usury ceiling off or raise the ceiling on mortgage interest rates. Lobbyists and groups are currently active in working toward this.

This all tends to indicate that the 7 per cent mortgage will be a thing of the past; furthermore, that the currently quoted 7.9 or 8.0 per cent mortgage obtainable today will look quite attractive in the near future, when interest rates will probably exceed 8 per cent.

In addition, there is a fine, large selection of homes from which to purchase. Although and not surprisingly, good neighborhoods are holding their values, there is a larger selection for buyers to more aptly fit their taste and personalities.

And contrary to all the news, there are good mortgages available and many fine lower interest assumptions on the market. Besides the source of Realtors, buyers in existing homes can probably get a new mortgage from their current mortgagee and transferred buyers can often obtain mortgages through banks where their companies have large accounts. Some sellers may even sell on a one-year contract, purchase money mortgage or other creative financing plans. Naturally, one should deal with Realtors skilled in these practices and knowledgeable of the market.

To wait until money is more plentiful on this go around may well mean less selection and higher rates to the buyer. Therefore, if you have needs or desires to purchase a home: 1) This is a good time relative to the future; 2) Consult a Realtor of your choosing to discuss your specific situation and desires; 3) Do it now.

A Realtor is a licensed real estate broker who is a member of and subscribes to the rules and ethics of the National Assn. of Realtors and is an active member of a local chapter.

They boost 'couple power'

Thank you for your interest and effort in bringing "The Marriage Encounter" movement to the attention of your readers. Billie Bachhuber's recent article was reported with fact and feeling. Because of this exposure, we received numerous inquiries. We welcomed this opportunity to encourage other local couples to "make their good marriages great" by attending a Marriage Encounter weekend.

In these days when the modern trend seems to encourage couples to "do their own thing and live as married singles," we are grateful to the Herald for reporting this alternative way to married life — a way designed to promote "couple power."

Chile trial just starting

by PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Chile's trial by fire is far from over.

The ruins of the presidential palace in Santiago are a symbol of the fall of democracy in Chile, for 40 years among the most determinedly democratic of all Latin American nations.

In one of its rooms, President Salvador Allende, himself a tragic figure, met violent death and thus brought to an end the Western hemisphere's first freely elected Marxist government and a three-year attempt to lead Chile into socialism within the constitution.

The military leaders who seized power in the Sept. 11 coup have promised to preserve the gains made by the poverty-stricken lower third of Chile's 8.99 million people under Allende, as indeed they must.

But they have yet to reveal whatever other plans they may have for Chile's future, including a target date for a restoration of an elected civil government.

For the military leaders who departed from their traditional neutrality in government, a first step must be to defuse the time bomb which divided the Chilean people and brought the country to the brink of civil war.

It could be they will follow the path of Brazil where another military government still rules nearly 10 years after seizing power in a time of mounting chaos and the threat of a leftwing takeover.

Like the Chileans, the Brazilian military had a record of respect for elected government.

The world's socialist nations universally blamed Allende's fall on the United States, citing economic pressures brought on by Allende's seizure of American properties.

Extreme leftists cited it as proof that only violent revolution could change a social and economic system.

Actually it proved neither. Allende won office with 36.3 per cent of the vote and represented a minority. Hurt the most by his policies were the middle classes and they were the ones who brought him down.

Perhaps a stronger man than Allende, or one less idealistic, could have held the extreme left of his social-communist coalition in check and compromised with the Social Democrats and Nationalist who were his chief opponents.

Certainly as early as a year ago he saw the dangers of civil war and warned against it.

And those who decry Chile's loss of democracy and date it from Sept. 11 might well have done their crying earlier — when leftist-led peasants were carrying out illegal seizure of farms and small industrial around Santiago with scarcely a slap on the wrist from government.

When middle class housewives began their protest marches against the Allende government and the acrid smell of tear gas filled the capital, it already was too late.

The greater significance of Sept. 11 might be that on that day the leftists gained a martyr. (UPI)

Nostalgia's bypassed barbers

It is easy, in this era of nostalgia, for each of us to recall fondly most of the great institutions of the Northwest suburbs.

Take restaurants, for example. I've only lived in this area for five years, but I can recall several good restaurants along Rand Road which have been replaced by other restaurants or by parking lots.

Remembered, too, are the unique persons who run restaurants, bars, even gas stations. They pass in and out of our lives without note; they are ordinary persons who offer special services at special times, and they then pass out of our field of vision.

There's one institution here that's escaped the nostalgia bling, and today it deserves a passing nod, a moment of recognition. After all, when was it last that you heard something good about barber shops?

Yeah, barber shops and barbers. The reason they've yet to become objects of enshrinement is that they're so necessary to a man's everyday life — and, in a special kind of way, so special.

They are the last of a kind of institutional men-only life style. Sure, women bring their young children into barber shops, but barber shops still remain primarily a refuge from the cares of the world.

And yet, they are ignored by us because it is a nuisance to take 20 minutes once every few weeks and sit in a barber chair, regardless of how witty the chatter from your barber.

A man never thinks back and remembers the great barbers he's had, because the entire process is so necessary and basically pretty dull. And all barber shops have a certain sameness to them, especially in the suburbs, where barber shops, as they must, lack the social role they have in small towns.

It's not always been that way, however, for it used to be that barber shops had a social role to play in the Northwest suburbs. Witness the case of Frank White.

The oddest thing about White was that he was a black man. Beyond that he operated a barber shop in the early 1900s that became known as "the star chamber."

It was called that because White used to quiz his customers as to their political beliefs. Allegedly he was able to predict the outcome of elections on the basis of his political interrogations.

Fashion

by Karen

Men's clothes nowadays are made of fabric guaranteed not to shrink, but that's not saying men's wallets won't.

Men have, in the past, been relegated to predominantly standards in fashion. In the past five years manufacturers have realized their dream — men, too, are style conscious.

Who would have thought that the boring black suits, white shirts and skinny ties of the past would be pushed aside to make way for today's bright shirts, bow ties and bold-patterned suits?

The English country look has influenced this year's men's wear with pattern and color the primary interests. Tweeds, flannels, shetlands, camel hair and corduroy are just a few.

THE NEWEST fabric is "stretch woven," a material produced by weaving cloth from fibers that have been linked by chemical or mechanical processes to resemble coil springs. Such fabrics look like traditional wovens but have the comfort and stretch of doubleknits.

Patterns are louder — tartans, windowpanes, overplaids, checks and houndstooth plaids. Coarsely textured tweeds, flannels and saxons are the woven wool favorites.

Changes in fabrics have been forced by substantial price increases in such natural fibers as wool and cotton, so the fall brings in a great number of mixtures of natural fibers with manmade fibers — combinations of polyesters that end the freezing effect of double knits which allow icy winds to blow through in winter.

Men take their clothes seriously these days. With that new concern they must be more aware of what looks good on what physique.

HERE ARE A few ways men can dress to slim a silhouette locked in combat with the scale.

—Don't wear lighter tones, and big, bold patterns.

—Do opt for patterns that thin you out... like stripes.

—Don't get suits that are too tight or too baggy. Proper fit is your best ally in giving the appearance of being thinner than you are. Avoid side-vented jackets, too; a center vent pares pounds as far as the eyes are concerned.

—Do carry proper fit one step further by choosing correct proportions. For instance: avoid especially wide ties — they emphasize girth.

—Don't wear wide lapels, they also add to the circumference. Wider lapels are the current fashion, but there are various widths from which to choose.

—Don't wear trousers with excessive flares... or heavy looking shoes... or two or three-tone styles which have a tendency to add bulk to the wearer. The same holds true for body-hugging knit shirts.

—Do try straight leg trousers and slacks, trim, one-tone shoes and less tapered shirts.

Do wear stripes.

Light plaids add girth.

No medium for messages

If I had to admit to the truth, the real reason I left home and got married was so I could have a pencil by the telephone.

As my husband tells me, I could have done this without getting married, but I had glorious dreams of raising a family who all would be trained in the value of having a workable pencil by the phone.

Now I was very serious about this goal and carefully kept a pencil by the phone for the first few years of our marriage. My husband, coming from a rather orderly family, was inclined to leave the pencil there, so my dreams of a generation of pencil-leavers had the background to develop into reality.

As an exercise in training for the future, I taped a crayon to each of our kids' play telephones as soon as they were old enough to eat it — the crayon as well as the telephone. I did that so they would get the idea that a writing instrument sort of goes along with a phone.

THAT WENT well until one day when I discovered our oldest child was tall enough to reach the phone. The pencil was missing.

It has been about four years now since that pencil disappeared, and I have tried almost everything to get the family back in line about how important this issue is.

For a while we had a clever pen holder that stuck to the side of the telephone. That lasted three days. I never could find out what happened to it, but I have a feeling it was lent to an encyclopedia salesman. Then we had one on a chain, but as everyone knows, pens and pencils on chains never work. As soon as it was installed, this one didn't either.

One neighbor suggested I buy a bunch of pencils — as sort of an overkill type of approach. This worked remarkably well for about a week. Then, as I discovered one day when I knocked the pencil can over with the telephone cord, not one of the 53 pencils had an unbroken or usable point.

I HAVE CONSIDERED putting up a chalkboard for phone messages, but I know the chalk would suffer the same fate as the pencils — as would a stylus if I chose to go the wax tablet route.

At the moment I am considering friend's idea of chaining a typewriter near the phone. The suggestion has merit because certainly I could see or hear someone trying to put the machine in his pocket or purse, or at least I could identify the evidence later.

My husband, tired of hearing me moan about media and messages, has pointed out that we could always remove the phone.

I am always amazed how I can adapt to a choice of inconveniences so quickly!

Educated eaters to learn by dining "Gourmet Dining Out" is the name of an innovative course designed by instructor Elaine Sherman and offered for the first time by the Maine-Oakton-Niles Adult and Continuing Education Program (MONACEP).

After the opening session at Maine East High School on Wednesday, Oct. 3, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., students will dine on alternate Wednesday evenings at five gourmet restaurants eating ethnic specialties and learning the pleasures, history and preparation of such food. Recipes of all dishes served and tips on how to prepare them will be provided. In some sessions, guest experts will give food demonstrations.

Fee for the course is $45 and includes dinners and gratuities. Readers may register or get further information by calling 686-3600.

For sorority, community

AOPI alum gives her all

by BILLIE BACHUBER

Working hard at what you choose to do — and fully enjoying the effort — sounds like a good formula for success. At least it works that way for Mrs. Wilbur Mottweiler Jr. of Mount Prospect.

Pert Patricia Mottweiler relishes her chosen role as wife-mother-homemaker. But she undertakes numerous outside-the-home activities with equal zest.

Mrs. Mottweiler, who majored in political science at DePaul University in Greencastle, Ind., especially enjoys working with today's young people.

"I get exhilarated just listening to them. They have dynamic dreams, and they are making definite plans for our world," she lauds the college age generation.

Mrs. Mottweiler gains her impressions from son Rick, a senior in pre-law at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, and his friends and from working on college campuses as a regional alumni and collegiate director for Alpha Omicron Pi, her sorority.

PROMINENT IN Pat's generous output of community and volunteer services is her commitment to her sorority. She has just retired as international executive vice president of Alpha Omicron Pi alumnae organization, having worked previously in various jobs and offices including the presidency of Chicago Council, North Shore (Chicago) and Northwest Suburban chapters.

Pat is also active in Northwest Suburban Panhellenic, an association that she values with women who share goals.

Mrs. Mottweiler began her 25-year alliance with Alpha Omicron Pi when she was a sophomore at DePaul. She firmly supports "Greeks" on college campuses.

"There is a need for such clubs and there always will be a need for students to work together producing the most of life, scholastically, socially and for charity," she said.

Pat cites her own personal experience as a good example of a college girl reaping worthwhile benefits from sorority membership.

"I was a shy, young coed and my sorority sisters helped me discover and use abilities I didn't know I had," she recalled.

HER SORORITY life also provided social opportunities that have lasted a lifetime. "Wherever I go, warm friends await," she declared.

Sororities also stress serious endeavors, Mrs. Mottweiler noted. Scholarship and philanthropic projects rate high in these clubs. Pat's own AOPI chapter supported the Frontier Nursing Service when she attended college; her local chapter now aids Illinois Children's Home; and the national sorority helps the Arthritis Foundation.

While Pat recognizes some persons have been hurt by a selective and competitive pledge system, she feels times — and collegians — are changing. She thinks girls decide where they want to go and what they want to do before they join any group.

RETIRED BUT NOT inactive, Mrs. Patricia Mottweiler, Mount Prospect, is no longer international executive vice president of Alpha Omicron Pi, but she's still involved in sorority and community endeavors.

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Enright

Prospect pair exchange vows

A Mount Prospect couple, Patricia Ann Reimann and Richard Wayne Enright, are making their home in Des Plaines since their Aug. 25 wedding in St. Emily's Catholic Church. They also work in Des Plaines, the bride for the First National Bank and the groom for Ladendorf Motors.

Pat, daughter of the Lewin Reimanns, 701 Dogwood Lane, chose a white organza bridal gown with lace panels on the Empire bodice and down the skirt. Her shoulder-length veil was secured by a Juliet cap of lace, and she carried Sweetheart roses, stephanotis and baby's breath in a nosegay.

Richard is the son of the Wayne Enrights of 125 N. Horner Lane. Both he and his bride are graduates of Hersey High School.

HIS SISTER, Barbara, was the bride's maid of honor; another sister, Coleen, 8, was flower girl; and his brother, Kevin, was best man. Also in the wedding party were Julie LaSelle, Des Plaines, as bridesmaid and Jerry Scheffers, Wheeling, groomsmen.

Barbara's dress was a yellow, green and orange floral chiffon with yellow satin trim. She wore a cap of yellow daisies and carried a matching bouquet. Julie's was in blue, yellow and bright green chiffon with a green daisy cap and matching bouquet. Coleen wore a yellow dress with orange, yellow and green trim.

After the noon, double ring ceremony, the couple greeted 87 guests at a reception at Rolling Meadows Holiday Inn. They honeymooned at Horseshoe Bend, Ark.

They married on Sunday

In a 4:30 double ring service that took place Sunday, Aug. 26, Nancy Hall of Palatine and Joseph Paul Olsen of Prospect Heights repeated marriage vows in St. Theresa Church, Palatine.

Nancy is the daughter of the George R. Halls, 107 S. Hickory, and Joseph is the son of the Junior Arthur E. Olsens, 1008 Sherwood Drive.

For her wedding Nancy chose ivory satin with lace bib and lace trim. Her veil was trimmed with the same lace and she carried white roses, baby's breath, mums and stephanotis.

Patil Dalton, Buffalo Grove, was matron of honor, and Debbie Puta; the bride's sister, Bernadette; and a cousin, Cathy Landerghini, all of Palatine, were bridesmaids. They wore blue rose-patterned chiffon gowns over ivory and carried blue mums and daisies. They also wore picture hats.

JESSICA HALL, 7-year-old sister of the bride, was flower girl and wore a gown identical to the bridesmaids' gowns.

Tom Holzkopf, Wheeling, was best man, and ushers were Chet Kiosowski, Mount Prospect; the bride's brothers, George and Mike; and the groom's brothers, Art and Dave.

A reception for 180 guests was held in the Camelot Restaurant, Des Plaines. Nancy, a '72 graduate of Fremd High, studied at Western Illinois University, and Joseph, a '71 graduate of Wheeling High, studied at Harper College. He is with Rothery Storage and Van Co., Elk Grove Village.

The newlyweds are making their home in Buffalo Grove.

"Nowadays the girls themselves have more to say about what sorority they join than the sorority does," she ventured.

Once a girl decides to join a Greek organization, however, she learns to help others through mutual effort and enjoyment, a practice that can be extended into her future life, Pat said. It's a tenet she herself follows.

MRS. MOTTWEILER contributes time and talents to many civic organizations. She has served on the Mount Prospect Youth Commission and is past president and director of the Mount Prospect Combined Appeal. She presently sits on the board of directors for Suburban Community Chest Council, a body serving more than 95 communities. Pat chairs its finance and allocations committee for 14 towns in the northwest suburbs.

Presently hospitality chairman for Northwest Community Hospital Auxiliary, Pat is directing activities of the Snack Shop, which opens at the hospital Nov. 1. Helpful to her in this job has been her past experience working at the Lunch Bucket at the hospital.

Through the years Pat has followed her son's interests by serving in related activities. She worked diligently for PTA, filling many offices including PTA presidencies at Westbrook Elementary School and Lincoln Junior High in Mount Prospect.

ONCE A CUB Scout den mother, she now belongs to the Boy Scout Women's Reserve.

"As bad as a man" about sports, Mrs. Mottweiler enjoys golf, tennis, bike riding and bowling. She's an avid fan of football, baseball and basketball and is a past president of Mount Prospect Little League Women's Auxiliary.

With it all, she still finds plenty of time for home and husband Bill, a consulting civil engineer, who thoroughly approves her busy life. The couple share an interest in bridge and play in a duplicate club. They dance with a square dancing group and have been co-presidents of Mount Prospect Dance Club.

The Mottweilers also like entertaining large groups for informal meals, and that includes large family reunions, Pat said.

And just in case her busy routine doesn't keep her trim, Pat's planning to attend exercise classes this fall.

Play increases understanding of alcoholism

"Lady on the Rocks," a play designed to increase understanding of alcoholism, will be presented tomorrow evening at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. The 8:30 performance in the hospital auditorium is open to the public.

Presenting the play will be a group of professional and amateur actors from the community. The one-act play lasts 30 minutes and is followed by a discussion.

There are four characters in "Lady on the Rocks": Deborah, a sophisticated and well educated housewife who has developed alcoholism but fails to recognize this; her husband Mark, an energetic executive who has no patience or understanding of his wife's problem; their 15-year-old son Danny, greatly aware of his mother's alcoholism; and his girl friend, Sue, whose father is a recovering alcoholic.

"Lady on the Rocks" was commissioned by the National Council on Alcoholism.

Alcoholism has become the nation's biggest untreated disease. In Illinois alone, there are in excess of 500,000 alcoholics. "Lady on the Rocks" is designed to increase public recognition that alcoholism is a treatable disease.

Tickets are free and can be obtained by contacting the Lutheran General Rehabilitation Center for Alcoholism, 696-2210.

Dear Dorothy: If one has never been allergic to nylon, it is possible to be allergic to Qiana? I wore my beautiful pink Qiana blouse, and, after an hour, I felt a rash around the back of my neck.
—Emma Droutman

My first thought is that you've been the victim of a staple label. Reason I say so with such rapidity is that this happened to me. My neck was so itchy I was half up the wall. Close examination disclosed a stiff label under the dress label. It would have made even an alligator uncomfortable. Synthetic fibers generally are nonallergenic and although Qiana has some different ingredients it is considered a form of nylon. So since you had no reaction to nylon there's no reason to find anything amiss with Qiana. If it was a dye troubling you, laundering or dry cleaning ought to take care of that. No, it's more likely it was one of those idiotic labels. Take a closer look.

Dear Dorothy: I love to bake yeast bread and everyone in the family enjoys it. I like to keep it in the bread bin, but a friend says it ought to be refrigerated. Is she right?
—Mrs. Fran McGrane

Yes. Homemade bread, not having any additives, doesn't keep too well after baking unless it is refrigerated or frozen.

Dear Dorothy: I can't figure out why cigar or cigarette ash is recommended along with a bit of oil to get rings off polished wood. What's the point?
—Dorcas Marchand

The point is that this ash is as fine as talcum powder, but has just enough abrasiveness to rub off such stains — providing that the surface has a good polish. Don't underestimate this last proviso. Too many people expect too much from such treatments.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Next On The Agenda

ELK GROVE GARDENERS

At tonight's meeting of the Garden Club of Elk Grove Village, three areas of interest will fill the agenda. Arlene Johnson will present a flower arranging workshop. Garden reception follows Laurin-Robison nuptials

A garden reception for Dana Lee Laurin and Stephen Robison at the Neil Laurin home in Arlington Heights feted the newlyweds after their Aug. 25 wedding in North Shore Unitarian Church, Deerfield.

The Laurin family lives at 1549 N. Evergreen, and Stephen's parents, the James Robisons, reside at 607 S. Albert St., Mount Prospect.

Dana chose her twin sister, Christie, as maid of honor and Mrs. Robert Lester of Champaign, Ill., as matron of honor. Junior bridesmaid was the groom's sister, 9-year-old Julie Robison. Stephen's brothers were his attendants, Richard as best man and Timothy the groomsman.

THE BRIDE WORE a white peau de sole gown with Alencon lace covering the bodice and a deep hem on the skirt. A Tudor cap of lace over peau de sole held her short veil in place. Her bouquet was a colonial arrangement of pink rosebuds, white daisies, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Her attendants were dressed alike in navy blue voile embroidered with white daisies, and they wore white picture hats tied with navy ribbon. Each carried a nosegay of white carnations and navy straw flowers.

The bride's and her honor attendants' dresses were all made by Mrs. Laurin, Julie's dress by Mrs. Robison.

The newlyweds are living in Carbondale after their two-week honeymoon in Door County, Wis. Stephen will graduate in December from Southern Illinois University with a forestry degree.

He attended Prospect High School and Harper College, and Dana is a graduate of Arlington High, Harper and the University of Illinois.

Millie Timmons is bride

Oak Grove Church in Doniphan, Mo., was the setting for the Aug. 25 wedding of Millie Timmons, daughter of Mrs. Frances Timmons, 348 Lyman Ave., Des Plaines, and Joseph Kennon, son of Mrs. Peggy Ponder, Forest Park, Ill.

For the 4:30 double-ring service, Millie chose a gown of white satin with a flocked nylon overlay featuring long sleeves and standup collar edged in ruffles. A headband of matching nylon held her fingertip veil and she carried a nosegay of red roses and white carnations.

Jean Russell, stepmother of the bride, from Poplar Bluff, Mo., appeared as maid of honor in a pink crepe dress. She carried two long-stemmed red carnations.

SUE STAMPLE, Des Plaines, was bridesmaid. She wore a blue satin dress with a blue dotted-swiss overlay and her flowers were two white long-stemmed carnations.

Joseph chose his brother, Larry, as best man. Other attendants were Bill Timmons, brother of the bride, David Smeltzer, Chicago, and Jeff Fisher, Cincinnati.

Following a reception in the church hall and a dinner at Current River Country Club, the newlyweds honeymooned at a cabin on Current River for a week.

Millie is a Maine East High School graduate and was employed at Ozark National Park, Mo. Her husband is a Purdue University graduate and has his own business in West Lafayette, Ind., where they will make their home.

Presbyterian churchwomen parade runway

"Parishes on Parade" is a special fall event for the Women's Fellowship of Southminster United Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights. Representatives of each of the parishes into which the church membership is geographically apportioned will model hand-crafted fashions Wednesday afternoon at the church. The 1 p.m. show includes door prizes and desserts made by one of the circles. Jan Impey is program chairman, Barbara Fay will do the commentary, and Charlotte Hunsicker is in charge of the models. Mrs. Impey and Barbara Halliday will provide special music. Decorations for the show are being made by Charlotte Lattot and Tallie McKenzie, and Mrs. McKenzie is handling reservations. Her phone is CL-9-1274.

Leading roles lead them to romance

Playing romantic roles together in a Chicago theater group advanced the true life romance of Patricia Rae Nielsen of Palatine and John Francis Tetzlaff of Chicago. They have known each other since kindergarten at St. Philomena School, Chicago, and are members of The Group, which played and sang for their Aug. 25 wedding. The afternoon ceremony took place in St. Philomena Church, with a reception immediately following in Indian Portage VFW Hall. Pat, daughter of the William Nielsens of 833 S. Harvard Drive, Palatine, wore a white silk organza gown enhanced with lace inserts. Her cathedral-length veil was held by a Juliet cap trimmed with seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath. HER SISTER Barbara Ann was maid of honor, and there were three bridesmaids: Jo Anne Curley, Carpentersville; Janet Larsen, Chicago; and Peggy Lee Scheffel, Countryside. All were gowned in lavender organza and wore lavender lace Juliet caps with short veils. They carried white carnations, purple statice, pink roses and orchid baby's breath.

John's parents are Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Tetzlaff of Chicago. His brother James, along with William Colby and David Reznick, both of Chicago, were groomsmen and Ralph LaBrack of Northlake was best man. The newlyweds are living in Chicago after a week's honeymoon in Jamaica. Pat works for the First National Bank of Chicago and John for Schwinn Bicycle Co. She attended Loyola University and Mundelein College, John studied at Wright Junior College and Northwestern University.

Letters to the Editor

Anti-incorporation view hit

'Let's plan our future'

In Gloria Jaworski's letter that appeared in the September 7 issue, she implied that incorporation of Prospect Heights would be a haphazard adventure. She also gave a Mack Sennett comedy description of our proposed police department and an ill-planned detailed account of the road maintenance service that would be offered to our community.

Most of Mrs. Jaworski's "concerns" could be realistically answered if she were to attend a PHIA meeting. There is really nothing more enlightening than going to the source.

Also, I believe that a little research into what our neighboring towns pay their mayors would be a real eye-opener for her. Except for the City of Chicago, I know of no other town that employs a 24-hour-a-day mayor. Indeed, these men are self-sacrificing individuals and should be highly commended for the time that they devote to their respective communities.

Revenue does not begin nor does it end with Heights Liquors. The PHIA does have a finance committee who have been looking into income sources for the proposed city.

Now for surveys. Does Mrs. Jaworski read the Herald? Your paper has reported on all surveys conducted in the area. Just recently you reported on a survey in the area of Prospect Heights bounded by Euclid, Elmhurst Road, Camp McDonald Road and Wheeling Road. There was also a survey of homeowners on Waterman Avenue going east to Schoenbeck Road. Also, three years ago the Prospect Heights Jaycees sent a form letter to all residents of Prospect Heights. In this letter, they asked questions as to whether one would prefer to remain unincorporated, annex to a neighboring community or to incorporate.

I would now like to refer you to an article written by the PHIA president that appeared in the September issue of our Town Bulletin. I believe that this letter will answer some of the questions proposed by Mrs. Jaworski and also bring to light some serious dangers to our community, if we do nothing to plan our future.

'Critic: read Bible'

There is a question of debate of what is right and what is wrong in the old Testament in relation to the New Testament. Apparently you have never read the New Testament. One of the main reasons there is a New Testament is to save us through Jesus Christ who changed many of the Old Testament's rules. Such as having more than one wife. When Jesus came and died for our sins and rose from the dead, he completely fulfilled the prophecies of the Old Testament. In other words, friend, there is no longer a need for the ways of the old Testament such as having more than one wife.

If you read between the lines of the Old Testament where sex-sin is mentioned, you would find that it clearly states that it was corrupt and uncommanded by God. It was purely human nature. As there is still sin today because of human nature it does not mean God accepts it. What you are in fact saying, sir, is "David got to do it, so why can't I?" Jesus tells us why. Furthermore, we do not consider the Bible an eternal fairy tale because Christ has already come fulfilling the Old Testament's prophecies.

We should not try to live by, but be taught by the Old Testament. We realize you have the right to your own opinion, but we believe you have been terribly misled in the teachings of the Bible. We pray that someday you will understand what God really expects of us.

Workshop praised

Dear Marianne and Dorie:
Your publicity workshop last Thursday, Sept. 6, was really helpful and a lot of fun. We weren't expecting such a lively entertainment, so that was a big bonus.

Now I hope we can apply your lessons and produce some well-written (at least workable) press releases for the Padlock Publications.

Many thanks for a pleasant and informative morning.

Where are outraged Americans?

Once this nation consisted of brave, strong and morally sound citizens who died and sacrificed in world wars, fed and fed weaker countries, and in all, directed their actions and aspirations in the framework of ecclesiastical and constitutional forefounded doctrines.

They're certainly not living the courageous American concept in damning and demanding impeachment of those gross culpable ones at the top.

Gutless people soon lose all that's valuable and often develop acute gastric ulcers.

Where now are the apple-pie-flag wavers, and furthermore, where has vanished American intestinal fortitude — in view of a "long train of abuses and usurpations," perpetrated by a morally base government?

Thank you

Sister Mary Agnes, administrator, gives her thanks in appreciation to the Reverend Fathers of the churches in the suburbs for their cooperation in donating space in their Sunday bulletin for our appeal for donations for our elevator fund. To those who mailed a check for one or more dollars, many, many thanks. The old folks give you their blessings and because your donations keep the old self-service elevator which frequently broke down in very good operating condition so they were not forced to walk the stairs, a danger to their health to visit friends on another floor.

Try it without the bat

My name is Elise Lennon, and I'm a student at Hershey High School. But this year my home is Brazil, because of a scholarship I received from American Field Service, a non-profit organization that grants international scholarships. Though AFS has chapters all over in U. S. schools and towns, as well as abroad, it is still unknown to many people. I think it merits some recognition. It started out as a volunteer ambulance corps with the Allied Forces during World War I, and again during World War II. The volunteers started in 1947 the winter program, in which foreign students came to the U. S. to live with a family for a year. Later came the Americans Abroad program, with a stay of one year or of two months during the summer. In 1971, the Multi-National program was initiated for foreign students who wish to live in a country other than the U. S. So AFS is a cultural exchange, to enable us and the people we encounter to become aware of the different cultures and life styles, and to develop understanding and respect between individuals.

With only a very small dream of ever succeeding, I applied for AFS last September in my school. I had interviews and written applications telling about myself, my family, and my daily life, and after being accepted by the school, regional, and national chapters, I received a letter saying that a family had been found for me in Brazil, and I would be leaving January 27. Having an opportunity like this had only been a dream, and it's still difficult to realize that it has come true!

Now with more than six months already gone, it's been time enough to become relaxed with my family, and school, and the language. But the learning and excitement never ceases. There are new things to see and do, and new people to meet every day. This land has a very special beauty, and the sights are fantastic, but no one can say the people aren't the best part. I've been received so warmly and readily by everyone, and people go out of their way to make me feel at home in their country. I think of all the friendships I've made here, and how lucky I was to be given the chance to make them. I'll remember these special people all my life, and I really don't know how I'm going to leave them.

It's logical that there have to be difficult times during the year. A big worry at the beginning was trying to speak and understand Portuguese. There's some loneliness and homesickness, and perhaps doubts about whether you'll fit in completely, but all of these problems disappear with time when you feel more secure with your family, and have a little more confidence. Then you can get over these small obstacles, you can just sit back and enjoy your year to the fullest extent.

My life here in Juiz De Fora (four hours from Rio de Janeiro) has 200,000 people and has a university, along with night clubs, sport clubs, music concerts, theater and a very busy and popular downtown. I study biology, chemistry, physics, Portuguese, math, history, and geography at a private school along with my brothers and sisters during the morning. On weekends sometimes my family goes to our farm (one-half hour away) to stay. There are horses, cows, pigs, chickens, ducks, and a soccer field, and sugar cane and black beans, and trees of papaya and banana. Also there are kerosene lamps and meals cooked outside on a stove heated by logs, and two hammocks to doze on after supper and listen to the peace. My family is very close knit, and likes to laugh and sing and joke. With every birthday or special holiday the house is filled with relatives and friends, and it's always a good time.

Though I've seen only a limited part, the places I do know show at least some of the diversity of Brazil. I've been to Rio de Janeiro — as beautiful and ro-

'It can help Mount Prospect'

He reviews Older Americans Act

The recent uproar in the senior citizen clubs over the appointment of a salaried coordinator and handling of the federal grant for the elderly of our community is a result of lack of information about legal provisions under which this grant was made.

This information is long overdue, obviously because it is not easy to come by. Getting information is highly time-consuming, and the people who should have come forth with it just don't have any time to spare. So I undertook to dig it up myself. I went to the library and with the help of Mrs. Mabel Laubenthal, the Mount Prospect librarian, dug through a stack of copies of Congressional Quarterly. I am happy to share my findings with all my senior citizen friends.

These grants come under a federal law known as the "Older Americans Act of 1965," which was passed by the Congress July 6 of that year, and signed into law by the late President Lyndon Johnson July 14, 1965.

This act was to run for five years, through fiscal 1970. A few years later it was extended through fiscal 1972. In substance, the Act authorized appropriations for grants to states and communities for planning and coordinating of programs for the elderly, for training of personnel to carry out the programs, and for establishing, not constructing of, senior citizen centers and staffing them with trained personnel.

During its lifetime (1965-1972) the Older Americans Act has been amended several times and expanded to include such programs as "Service Roles in Retirement," to devise ways for older persons to assist children and elderly individuals with exceptional needs; a "Retired Service Volunteer Program (RSVP)" and "Foster Parents Program" to include "senior companions" for the aged and disabled; and "Nutritional Program." New provisions have been added authorizing appropriations for grants to states and local governments for community

Screening isn't bad

As a kindergarten teacher in Dist. 15, I would like to react to the "awful" statement you made about kindergarten screening. The statement I am referring to appeared in your paper on Friday, September 7. It stated, "An apprehensive look crosses five-year-old Beverly Rayner's face during the most awful part of school life, her first test."

I feel I am qualified to oppose your statement since I administered the screening to Beverly while the picture was being taken. The screening situation is made as pleasant as possible for the kindergarten child. I screened all 57 of my students and not one of them seemed to mind it. In fact, children at this age are very eager to please. They love to be able to show how much they know. Also it helps the kindergarten teacher prepare her programs for the year to meet the individual needs of each of her students.

I would appreciate your cooperation in printing this letter so that present and future parents will continue to have a positive outlook on the kindergarten screening.

A Smith in Springfield?

Last night I watched "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" on TV; this morning I read the Herald editorial regarding the State Board of Education. It is a good editorial — read it again, carefully! Since education should be one area not dominated by politics and/or religion, but one that provides good and fair education for all, it is too bad Mr. Bakalis' idea of a blue-ribbon search committee comes so late.

The prime function of the board as one sees and ears about it seems to be that of selecting a new superintendent. Can it possibly be that as important as that position is, the main purpose of a seat on the board is the almighty (educational) dollar, and where it is to be spent?

Is there a "Mr. Smith" out there somewhere; or "Miss" or "Mrs."?

Fire cadet stories draw fireman's praise

I wish to thank the Mount Prospect Herald for all the publicity given the Fire Cadet Program started in Mount Prospect. Also the interest and nicely written articles by your Tom Van Malder.

The bill to lower the age of a fireman to 18 and to give points to a cadet that has completed the two year course has been passed by both the Illinois House and Senate and signed into law by Governor Walker.

I also want to publicly thank all the other people who have given this cadet program their backing: showing their faith in the youth of today.

such a short sighted view. The benefits of the fee payment for textbooks far outweigh the disadvantages.

Most conscientious, responsible parents realize the tremendous expense of our educational system, the updating of textbooks and materials is constant, and feel this is one way they can help give their children the best in education.

Real estate taxes supply the bulk of the educational expense. These are paid by all home owners — childless people, citizens on a fixed income — and no responsible parent should feel they are getting "stung," rather that they are helping to alleviate a tax burden on those who do not use the school system, and also give the schools room to try new textbooks and materials.

I feel the Herald is doing a disservice to the community, suggesting parents are getting "stung," they are in fact getting 100 per cent value for their investment in children.

Now, after reading the provisions of the Older Americans Act, it is clear that in no case the grants are made to individual organizations or clubs. This means that neither the Extensioneers, the Young at Heart, the St. Raymond seniors nor any other club will get to pocket any of $23,100 grant to the Mount Prospect community. Instead they will get help and services as outlined by law through the office of the senior citizens coordinator. The above information should also make it clear that the job of a coordinator is not for a neophyte. It is a job demanding high skills and training in the public relations area, a keen insight into the lives and problems of the senior citizens in our community, and a tactful diplomacy in corresponding and meeting with federal, state and local officials, if we senior citizens are to get the benefits as provided to us by the Older Americans Act of 1965.

It is my opinion that we the senior citizens of Mount Prospect are entering a new era. The federal grant, the appointment of the coordinator and the establishment of the central office are three big steps forward. We must remember that this is only the beginning, and as we all know, every beginning is hard. As Alex Clark, an American clergyman, once said: "Let us watch well our beginning, and the results will manage themselves."

Arlington posts 2nd win; stops Prospect, 28-6

by JIM COOK

Transplanted Bob Walther — long time Arlington football coach but now Director of Student Activities at arch-rival Prospect — would have offered his old red coaching jacket to the Knight grid-ers if they had beaten the Cardinals.

The windbreaker, though, probably wasn't even wrinkled as Arlington marched to an impressive 28-6 triumph in an exceptional display of ball control.

"I realize that our (Arlington) teams have been fairly strict running teams," the Cards' new head man Chuck Haines explained. "I hope we gave an indication that we're going to throw this year, even under conditions like these."

The conditions Haines mentioned were a bit on the extraordinary side. There was a gusty south wind playing havoc with punts and passes, but even more bizarre was the high-voltage wire that dangled dangerously on the fence surrounding the field and the on-again, off-again problem with the stadium lights that interrupted play on several occasions.

The hot wire may have sparked the Cardinals in more ways than one. The winners rushed for 260 of their 337 total yards and racked up 18 first downs along the way.

"It's tough playing defense all night," Prospect coach Don Williams said. "We'd have them stopped and then helped them out with a stupid penalty."

Arlington executed a whopping total of 63 offensive plays to Prospect's 43. "You give anybody the ball two-thirds of the time and you're asking for trouble," Williams added.

Arlington's first series of downs wasn't controlled football at all — it was unstoppable football. Beginning at his own 37, Card quarterback Ward Schell bootlegged for 25 yards, handed to fullback George Yurkovich for 18 stripes and capped the effortless drive by optioning to Craig Bernhardt who broke two tackles for the final dozen yards and a score. Three plays, 53 yards and a 7-0 lead.

"That quick touchdown and the way they did it really hurt," Williams said. "They really didn't do anything we weren't expecting. We drilled against that belly-option offense all week."

Scott Narup put the ball in Arlington's hands again with a fumble recovery and the Cards were on the move again. Setting up at the Knights' 47, Schell mixed his plays and completed two curl-in passes to Jeff Cleveland that prolonged a sustained drive.

Four minutes later, Schell burst outside for seven yards and a 14-0 Arlington edge that stood up through two more light failures and the intermission.

"They made some adjustments at the half and we just didn't react too quickly," Haines said. "They took away our inside game and we took on an extra burden with all of those foolish penalties."

Arlington took possession of the second-half kickoff and was stopped cold by the likes of Prospect's Mark Luciani (11 tackles, three assists), Bill Novaek (10-2), Keith Lexby (8-2) and Jay Loos (7-3).

But while sacking Bernhardt for a loss, Prospect was nailed for a facemask infraction that kept the Card drive alive. Sticking to the ground game, Schell capped an 80-yard drive on a quarterback sneak.

Prospect appeared to have the 6-foot-1, 187-pound senior stacked up at the line of scrimmage, but Schell's legs kept churning and once through the maze of players, he broke free for a 33-yard scoring scamper that increased the Cards' advantage to 21-0.

"We were still in the game at half-time," Williams said. "I think the turning point was that penalty because we came right back and scored."

That the Knights did, in powerful fashion. Embarking from its own 26, halfback Jon Devero slashed for 12 yards, scabbard Brad Schmidt for 18 and Devero again for five to the Arlington 39.

Quarterback Mike Quade took to the airways and laid a perfect strike into Schmidt's hands at the one where a quarterback sneak put Prospect on the board, but trailing, 21-6.

Another fumble recovery — this time by Doug Botters at the Knight 22 — presented Arlington with great field position for its final tally.

It was all Bernhardt who carried 19 times for 87 yards. The junior halfback blasted outside for 18 yards, suffered a two-yard loss and then rammed home from six yards out. Don Kamps was perfect with his fourth conversion attempt as the score settled at 28-6.

Arlington boosted its record to 2-0 overall while dropping the Knights to 0-2.

Elk Grove adds Wheeling to list

by PAUL LOGAN

There appears to be a new 1-2 running punch at Elk Grove that might — just might — be as deadly as the super duo of '72.

Lacking the similar first names, last initials and total season rushing statistics of ex-sensations Jeff Stewart (921 yards) and Jeff Schroeder (873), the combination of Don Weadley and James Goggin might not sound too terrific. But check out their second-game stats Friday night against host Wheeling:

• Weadley — 17 carries for 207 yards and two touchdowns, the first from one yard out and the second a magnificent 94-yarder!

• Goggin — 22 carries for 153 yards and two touchdowns of 25 and 27 yards.

One thing's certain. Wheeling — a team that didn't meet Elk Grove the past two years when it won the Super Bowl — had to be greatly impressed by the Weadley-Goggin tandem. Coupled with some brilliant offensive blocking and a handful of turnovers, this Grenadier team shocked the Wildcats with a sudden comeback victory, 20-13.

When one team totals nearly 200 yards (398 to 203) more than the other and wins by twice the score, the word "comeback" seldom is used by the victor. However, until midway in the third quarter, it looked like the Wildcats would be ending their eight-game losing streak and also smashing the Grove's sparkling 16-straight win streak.

Wheeling, now 0-2, led after the first quarter, 7-0, thanks to a fancy 17-yard run by Joe Damore and Mark Bychowski's kick.

Then the wind — one of the strongest for a night game in memory — played its first of many tricks. An Elk Grove punt went a minus five yards and, one play later, it was 13-0 Wheeling. A 15-yard pass from Ken Slepicka to Bill Frank made it that way. Slepicka hit on nine of 14 for the game.

A fumbled kickoff put Wheeling's offensive team back on the field again. Down it drove only to be stopped by inches on fourth down. Still, an upset appeared to be in the offing.

It wasn't to be. With just about four minutes left in the half, Weadley and Goggin began moving down the field. The only time they didn't carry in the 11-play drive was when James Hammers passed to Mike Brandt for 27 yards down to the Wheeling one. This clutch play allowed Weadley to blast over with just 15 seconds left for a 13-6 halftime score.

Wheeling almost put the win away on the first drive of the second half. Starting from its 42, the offense went to the Grove five with the help of a 24-yard pass from Slepicka to Pfister. However, Harry Buerger intercepted near the end zone to turn the game around, according to Grove coach Don Schnake.

"Cat coach Jack Liljeberg said he thought the turning point came after two running plays by Weadley. That's when the 170-pound unheralded senior broke loose for his MSL record-breaking run from scrimmage. The old mark of 92 yards was set in 1963 by Prospect's Grant Gentry.

Don Weadley

James Goggin

Throwing a block near midfield to take the pressure off Weadley was — you guessed it — Goggin. Weadley's two-point run put the Grenadiers in the lead for good at 14-13.

Then the wind, which was blowing against the Grove, played a part in the next two turnovers that were converted into touchdowns. Both times the ball just went a little past the required 10 yards when first Weadley and then Buerger recovered as Wheeling rooters watched in horror.

After the first recovery by Weadley, Goggin broke away on his third attempt for a 25-yard score. The second straight turnover taken by Buerger was chased in for points on a 27-yard run by Goggin.

The 20-point third quarter made the final 12 minutes appear dull by comparison, but the Grove dominated that period too.

"That wedge blocking up the middle blew us out in the second half," said Liljeberg. "That center and those two guards — I don't know who they are, but they did a good job."

Center Rich Radzis and his guard buddies Tom Malinowski and Dave Horst-man were the big reasons why Weadley and Goggin ran to glory.

Schnake said that "they must of done a good job" in speaking of the offensive line's hole making ability, but he couldn't praise individuals until he watches the game film. And added, "Weadley did a helluva job. I don't need the film to see that."

Falcons threaten often, score twice in 14-0 win

by DON FRISKE

Forest View was churning all night but couldn't score when they got close to Rolling Meadows' goal line. They did score enough, however, to defeat the Mustangs 14-0 last Friday night.

John Kronforst was the Falcons' big churner, collecting 210 of Forest View's total 326 yards on the ground with 31 carries. He also scored one of their touchdowns on a one-yard blast and kicked both of their extra points.

Rolling Meadows never could get moving offensively, even though their defense held up well when the Falcons got close to the goal line. But Falcon mistakes also aided the Mustangs.

With the Falcons kicking off to start the game, the Mustangs had the ball on their own 27 yard line.

The Mustangs gave the ball back to the Falcons by fumbling it on their first play from scrimmage. In seven plays, the Falcons couldn't score, with a touchdown called back due to a penalty.

On their own nine-yard line, the Mustangs took over. On fourth down, they were forced to punt, and again, the Falcons had first down from the Mustangs' 33.

This time the Falcons got the ball down to the nine-yard line again, but failed to score in 11 plays.

The Mustang defense had held up and the first quarter ended without a score.

Early in the second quarter, the Falcons were in a punt situation, the only one they were to encounter the entire game. The Falcon punter got a bad snap from the center and was forced to run the ball, getting it back to the scrimmage line.

The Mustangs had the ball on their opponent's 39-yard line, one of only three times they had the ball in Falcon territory. In three plays, they lost seven yards as punter Gary Olson kicked a 28-yarder to put the Falcons deep in their own territory. Olson was busy for the Mustangs with seven punts, averaging 37.8 yards per kick.

Utilizing two long runs, the Falcons were about to score the first and only touchdown they needed to win. Breaking two tackles, Kronforst carried the ball for 47 yards for one of the Falcons' 14 first downs, as compared to the Mustangs' five.

On third down from the Mustang's 42-yard line, Falcon fullback Ken Holan split up the middle, and then cut to the left sideline for a 42-yard touchdown run. Kronforst's kick was good, and the Falcons led 7-0 with 6:18 remaining in the first half.

The Falcons' early mistakes almost came back to haunt them late in the third quarter. Mustang quarterback Steve Breitbell faded back to unload a pass to receiver Dan Jordan. Hit by two defenders, Jordan missed the ball on the Falcons' 15 and the Mustangs were furious.

"I thought for sure we would have gotten an interference call on that one," exclaimed Angelo Barro, Mustang coach. "If we would have gotten the call we would have had first down, and if Jordan wouldn't have been hit, we would have had the ball deep in their territory."

The refs saw the play differently, however, and the Mustangs were forced to punt from their own 37. Holan caught the punt on his 26 yardline and returned it 73 yards, before being upended on the Mustangs' one yard line. Holan ended the game with 70 yards from scrimmage in nine carries for a 7.7 average.

Kronforst took over from there, carrying the ball in and then kicking the extra point to end the scoring at 1:46 in the third quarter.

The Falcons also had the ball within the Mustangs' 15-yard line on two other occasions, but gave it away on an interception and a lost fumble.

"We could have put the game away a lot earlier than we did," said Fred Lusow, the Falcons' new head coach. "But our own mistakes kept us from doing it. This happened to us last week too when we failed to score in key situations. This sort of thing we have to stop."

The Falcons' quiet coach gave well-deserved praise to both his offensive and defensive units.

"I think from the second quarter on, we had their defense pretty well figured out," commented Lusow. "Our offensive line then started to open big holes for us."

The Falcons controlled the game with 62 plays from scrimmage while the Mustangs had only 48. The Falcons also gained a total of 353 yards.

The Falcon defense stopped the Mustang's offensive unit by allowing them only 103 total yards.

The Mustangs' longest run from scrimmage was 16 yards on the last play of the game by Breitbell. The Falcon defense held the Mustangs to an average of only 1.5 yards per run.

Hawks trail 12-0 early; rally for win

by DON FRISKE

For awhile, it looked like the Harper Hawks were going to be trounced by Kennedy-King Saturday night. The Statesmen led 12-0 after two quick touchdowns in the first quarter and only 6:10 had been used on the clock.

The Hawks fought back to win, however, 27-18, much to the delight of the home crowd at Forest View High School.

John Eliasik, Hawk coach, felt the reason for the early lapse was that his Hawks just weren't ready defensively.

"They had a very fast team that took us a little time to adjust to," commented Eliasik. "Our defense wasn't penetrating well in the early part of the game, but once we got ready mentally, we were all right."

The Statesmen's first score came on a 23-yard run by Russ Catlett at 11:54 in the first period. Eliasik felt that Catlett was one of the fastest runners his Hawks will come across all year.

The Hawks lost the ball on a fumble on their first play from scrimmage. Catlett again scored a touchdown, this time on a nine-yard run, as a result of the Hawks' mistake.

But the Hawks settled down after this touchdown and came back to score on a 14-yard pass play. Hawk quarterback Bob Andrews threw to split end Erv Kimbrough with about a minute to play in the first quarter.

The Hawks' defense set up their second touchdown when they recovered a fumble in their own end zone that would have been a score for Statesmen had the runner held on to the ball.

Taking over on their own 20-yard line, it took the Hawks only three plays to cover the 80 yards they needed to take the lead.

Steve Frankovic, who prepped at Arlington High School, gained 17 yards on two runs, getting the ball to the 37. This set the stage for Marty Williams' 63-yard touchdown run. Williams, getting key blocks from his offensive line, broke up the middle and then went to the left side-line to give the Hawks a 12-12 tie at 3:54 in the second quarter. Hawk placekicker Kevin Wilson hoisted the extra point, and the Hawks had the lead for good.

The biggest problem for the Hawks was penalties totalling 130 yards. "Every time we'd get the ball moving, a penalty would set us back," said Eliasik.

The Hawks, again utilizing the big play, kept free from penalties to score their third touchdown.

Again Andrews hit Kimbrough for a touchdown pass covering 39 yards with only 38 seconds left in the first half. The Hawks took a 20-12 lead to the locker room at halftime.

At 10:30 in the third quarter, the Statesmen came within two points of the Hawks on a one-yard plunge. But again their extra point attempt failed.

To complete the scoring, the Andrews-Kimbrough combination was again put to use. The 13-yard pass gave the Hawks a first down and the ball on their opponent's four-yard line.

Frankovic ended the scoring on a four-yard run with Wilson again kicking the extra point. Frankovic had scored earlier from eight yards out, but the play was nullified on a 15-yard holding penalty against the Hawks.

The Hawks outgained the Statesmen with 310 yards to their 246, but the hosts only earned 11 first downs, while their guests managed 16, five of these as a result of Hawk penalties.

Steger directs Lancers to third victory

Lake Park slows down Fremd, 22-7

by KEITH REINHARD

Kurt Steger lived up to his billing Saturday afternoon.

The rangy Lake Park quarterback is being groomed for all-state honors. He boosted that candidacy a great big notch while the Lancers were soundly disposing of a visiting Fremd eleven, 22-7.

It was the third victory in a row this season for Bob Monken's Tri-County powerhouse and their second in success with superior protection Saturday, allowing him to launch 23 passes and ring up all the scoring the Lancers really needed.

In the meantime, a Vike running game that had raced roughshod over Niles East eight days earlier was limited to a mere 76 yards.

"Their linemen both ways have to be complimented," Ratcliff added. "We had Steger on the run a number of times and they'd keep us away long enough for him to get off the pass anyway. And their defensive kids had us pretty bottled up all day."

Lake Park tallied the first two times they laid hands on the ball. After the opening kickoff they drove 66 yards to paydirt with Steger connecting on an 11-yard pitch to Bruce Semersky through two defenders for the capper.

On the next kickoff Tom Bullen gathered in the sphere at his own 0-yard line and slipped as he started off. That left Fremd deep in a hole and three plays later they punted back out to mid-field.

Steger and company wasted no time cracking the scoreboard again. After two plays Tom Saccomanno gathered in a 39-yard heave to make it a 12-0 contest and this time Steger ran across the conversion attempt for two more points.

The next Viking drive spluttered out after five plays and Lake Park went on offense again. On this occasion, however, Steve Dwyer intercepted a Steger pass and returned it 20 yards to the Lake Park 23.

The very next play saw Bullen break loose on a 23-yard scoring scamper, Steve Dwyer applying the key block that sprang him loose. Keith Cumiskey toed over the extra point and the Lancer lead was halved to 14-7.

There was little more for Fremd fans to cheer about the remainder of the afternoon. Lake Park did most of the threatening. The final statistics showed the hosts owning a 22-4 edge in first downs with the guests dominating the punting, seven times to one.

Two other Lancer threats were halted by interceptions, Dwyer snaring one of them and Mark Otteman the other. Lake Park also had a 33-yard field goal attempt go wide.

Finally, Monken's gang pushed another score to clinch the win with 2:15 left on the clock. A 25-yard pass from Steger to his brother Kevin and another 11-yard completion — both on third and long yardage plays — set the stage and Saccomanno lugged it over from the nine.

St. Viator does it again; handles favored opponent

by LARRY EVERHART

Maybe one of these years this staff will learn.

Last week, for the second straight year, Herald sportswriters to a man picked Lane Tech to beat St. Viator in football. Nothing against the Lions, but after all, hasn't Lane both years been one of the highest-rated teams in the Chicago area and a strong contender to win the coveted city title?

The Indians have, but St. Viator — again, for the second time in a row — wasn't impressed. Despite being out-gained 211-151 in total yards, the Lions came up with the big plays when they were needed, both offensively and defensively, to pull off a tense 16-15 upset Friday night at Elk Grove.

The eventual deciding score came with 4:29 left in the third quarter when hard-working Joe Littwin, individual Lion star of the evening, swept 11 yards into the end zone. Steve Bobowski, who had earlier kicked a critical 26-yard field goal, toed the winning point to make it 16-7.

The Indians wouldn't let any of the home crowd relax, though, culminating a 99-yard, 11-play drive for a score with 7:03 left. A two-point conversion run by Bill Neilsen, who had just scored from one yard, left the visitors one point short.

St. Viator managed to kill most of the remaining time on the ground. Lane Tech did get the ball once more, but was badly hurt on a 15-yard holding penalty on a long punt return and could not get another first down.

The key to St. Viator's defensive strategy was to stop All-American running back Mike Morgan. The 6-foot, 198-pounder has blinding speed and scored 20 touchdowns last season, including an incredible seven from 90 yards or more.

As St. Viator assistant coach Pat Mahoney said, "Except for one breakdown, we contained him pretty well." Morgan, who rushed for 143 yards last week against Carmel, had 86 Friday in 11 carries, but 63 came on one play. Morgan exploded around end for that stunner on the third play of the game, quickly it was 7-0, and the Lions appeared to be in for a long night.

Undaunted, they marched right back 70 yards, with the help of two big Lane penalties, scored on a 10-yard pass from Jim Bucaro to Rick O'Donnell, who was open over the middle. A pass failed for the two-point try and it was 7-0.

A big break helped the Lions on their next series. On fourth down and inches to go at the Lane four-yard line, there was a mixup on the snap and fumble — but the ball squirted forward and an alert Lion fell on it. It was first and goal, and after a penalty, Bobowski kicked his 26-yard field goal to put Viator ahead for good.

A sudden third-quarter explosion was decisive. From the Lion 33, Bucaro completed a screen pass to Bernie Borschke, who turned it into a 41-yard gain. Then Littwin swept twice in a row for 15 and 11 yards and the clincher.

Littwin ended up with 86 yards in 26 carries and Bucaro completed six of 16 passes for 71.

Stars on defense were Greg Casclaro, O'Donnell and John Walsh. Mahoney praised his offensive line of Jim Quinnell, Walsh, Vic LaMantia, Marty Drazba and Tim Hales, adding that none had any varsity experience until this fall.

"Without Tom Maher and Tom Horvath playing at all, and still beating Lane Tech — you've got to figure that's a team effort," grinned Mahoney. Maher, who gained 750 yards last year, and Horvath, one of the best linemen, both have leg injuries.

Conant scores first but Hersey rebounds for impressive victory

by KEITH REINHARD

Conant's best strategy Friday night after scoring a touchdown in the first two minutes of play, would probably have been to pick up the football and run right into the school, turn out the lights and lock up the field.

They didn't respond that way however. And that was their first mistake.

A few moments later they committed their second miscue and it tore open the flood gates. Visiting Hersey roared through with 11 consecutive scoring plays within the next 34 minutes to post a 39-6 conquest in this Mid-Suburban League liftdier on the Cougar field.

Combining the offensive expertise of veteran signal caller Mark Zakula with an awesome defensive structure and riding on the crest of gale-proportioned winds, the Joe Gilwa-coached Huskies were virtually unstoppable through the first three quarters of play.

The winds stymied the Cougar attack most of the first and third stanzas and Hersey's fierce line took command the rest of the way with a net result of 18 yards rushing for the hosts and only one first down over a 40-minute span after the game's opening tally.

This left the Hersey offense on the field most of the way and Zakula utilized the time wisely. He passed for a pair of touchdowns and scored once himself in spearheading his team's second victory in as many outings this fall.

"We had them down and then not only let them get up, we allowed them to hop in a tank and run right over us," Conant coach Ralph Losee shrugged afterwards. "One play certainly turned things around awfully quick."

The play that apparently turned the tide occurred shortly after the home team had lit up the scoreboard. Hersey had kicked off originally and Conant recovered the onside kick. Three plays later Bob Boreczak hit Len Olsen with a 10-yard pass and the Cougars led 6-0.

The guests went nowhere on three passing plays following the ensuing kick-off and were forced to punt. And on this play the boot was bobbled, allowed Hersey to regain control deep in Conant territory. Five plays later a Zakula to Steve Block fling knotted things up and Dan Damato's extra point kick put the visitors ahead to stay.

Five plays later Hersey was back on offense. Zakula scrambled and hit Block for a 21-yard gained down to the four where workhorse Jim Spicuzza lugged it in. After another Damato kick it was 14-6 at the end of the quarter.

The blitz continued in period two. A 35-yard jaunt by Spicuzza primed the next TD with Zakula taking it in himself and running over the extra point too for a 22-6 halftime bulge.

In the third quarter there was a safety, Randy Kurinsky and Phil Kelly breaking in to nail Boreczak 10 yards behind the line of scrimmage, and two more touchdowns. Mark Krause rammed up the middle for one and Jeff Louis registered the other by gathering in a 12-yard pitch from Zakula.

Conant finally mounted one extended drive in the waning moments of the contest, advancing to within 10 yards of paydirt. A couple of Boreczak to Paul Gebhart passes keyed the advance, but Hersey's defensive line toughened up then and brought Boreczak down for a 16-yard loss to quell the threat.

Palatine sinks Schaumburg, 32-19

Rave notices for an aerial show

by ART MUGALIAN

All Palatine was happy. The Palatine fans were happy. The Palatine coaches were happy. The Palatine players were bruised and happy. Even the Palatine principal was happy.

SCRAMBLING AWAY from a Schaumburg defender is Palatine's Andy Donahue in Mid-Suburban meeting Friday evening. Donahue engineered the Pirates to a satisfying 32-19 victory, passing for two scores and counting one touchdown on a sneak. (Photo by Bob Finch)

What caused all the happiness? The first football win of the season, that's what.

Friday night Arv Herstedt's Pirates spread a lot of local joy by pouncing Schaumburg 32-19 in the first Mid-Suburban meeting of the two teams.

Bob Ferguson's young Saxons came into the match as distinct underdogs, but for three quarters they didn't know it. They opened the scoring early in the second period at the end of a long drive from their 20. Quarterback Dave Hill's 11-yard pass into the end zone caromed from Saxon Rich Godinez's hands into the arms of Schaumburg's Jeff Boji for the freakiest TD of the new season.

"I questioned the call myself," a surprised Ferguson admitted after the game, although he wasn't sure if Godinez had touched the ball. Schaumburg benefited from a little-known high school rule which allows two offensive players to touch a forward pass.

Palatine came right back for a TD and a lead they never relinquished. Terry Tansey returned the ensuing kickoff from the 10 to midfield. From there, Andy Donahue quarterbacked his Pirates to the end zone.

Two clutch passes to Jim Hickey and some forceful running by Jim Maycan set up a one-yard scoring sneak by Donahue. Tim Lane's kick made it 7-6.

The score stood at 7-6 at the half and the team stats were about dead even. But the third quarter changed all that and the fourth was a different contest.

About halfway through period three, Donahue passed to Hickey for 12 yards to the Pirate 40.

On the next play, Tansey went off right tackle, cut against the grain to his left, broke two tackles and scampered for a TD.

"He cut back really slick," a happy Herstedt commented later. "I was really glad to see that."

It was the first spectacular run this year by the highly touted Tansey.

Hill brought his team back momentarily with a drive fueled mostly with aerial strikes of 17 yards to Wayne Morgan, 20 yards to Frank Lipko, and nine yards to Scott Scholz. Fullback Tom Martino scored from the one-yard line, but a Hill-to-Morgan extra-point pass just failed and the Saxons trailed 13-12.

The rest of the game was all Palatine and Donahue-to-Mike McCoslin. The Pirates' QB found his favorite receiver four times for 91 yards and two TD's in the closing 13 minutes of play.

The late Palatine air attack put the damper on any further Saxon chances, and, although each team scored late in the fourth quarter, the game was over long before.

Herstedt explained his team's second-half awakening. "I guess we started wanting it more," he said.

"They just put it to us," Ferguson conceded. "Donahue's a fine passer, and they took advantage of our inexperienced secondary. We've got all underclassmen in the defensive backfield."

Ferguson saw signs of encouragement. "We played an excellent first half," he said. "Our boys came to play."

He went on to praise Morgan, his running back who gained 79 yards in 20 carries.

But Herstedt's ebullience was hard to miss. He seemed almost delighted in pointing out the frequent miscues his team made on offense, and he chastised his defense for some unaggressive play.

"But I'm happy for them, we won, and everybody played on both sides, and that's all that really matters," the Pirate coach said, and, of course, he was right.

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Danial Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes to tailing $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Opposition looms to annexation in Lake County

by LYNN ARINOFF

Wheeling officials said Friday they will seek legal grounds to object to a proposed Buffalo Grove annexation in Lake County that will cut off village expansion to the north.

The proposed annexation of 80 acres north of the Chevy Chase Country Club would extend Buffalo Grove about two miles from Wheeling's northern boundary east of Milwaukee Avenue.

Wheeling trustees contacted about the annexation said they would like to oppose the move if they have legal grounds to do so. All four said they will seek a legal opinion from the village attorney.

"IT SURE IS a sudden jolt," said Trustee Al Lang. "I would like to oppose their annexation if we have a legal foot to stand on. I would not be real happy about being cut off that way. This would really surround us."

Trustee John Koeppen explained that Wheeling's expansion has already been blocked in most directions. "We can't go west because of Buffalo Grove, and with the anticipated incorporation of Prospect Heights, our only growth would be to the north," he said. "If they come around to the north, we're just tied in." Wheeling is blocked on the east by the Cook County Forest Preserve.

Wheeling officials will have to decide their course of action shortly since the petition for annexation is expected to be filed within the next two weeks. The Centex Homes Corp. is planning a townhouse and condominium development on the site.

Trustee Bill Hein said Wheeling may be able to oppose Buffalo Grove's expansion on grounds that it is strip annexation. "I'd like to check into the legality as far as strip annexation," he said. "It puts it right straight across our northern boundary, and it also looks like they're trying to get access to Lake-Cook Road as well as Chevy Chase itself."

ALTHOUGH WHEELING officials have long expressed interest in expanding into Lake County, the village failed to object this spring when Buffalo Grove made its first move east along Wheeling's northern boundary.

In that annexation, Buffalo Grove obtained 105 acres along the Lake-Cook County line, connected to the village by a narrow corridor of land. At the time, Wheeling officials expressed concern that village expansion would be blocked, but never filed any formal objection to the annexation.

Now Buffalo Grove is using that uncontested annexation to expand further eastward along Wheeling's northern boundary. Originally Centex proposed keeping its project in unincorporated Lake County, but decided to annex to Buffalo Grove after that village said it would file a protest to the development. In their objection, Buffalo Grove officials said they thought their village could do a better job of providing utilities and other services to the development.

Hein said he could not "figure why Buffalo Grove is coming this way rather than going straight north. Koeppen, however, said he could see Buffalo Grove's point. "They're taking the corridors where they can get them," he said.

Of the Wheeling officials contacted, only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said he was not concerned about the proposed annexation. He said he was not particularly interested in expanding into Lake County.

Trustees Don Jackson and Ed Berger were unavailable for comment.

In the past, village officials have said expansion northward might cause problems because Wheeling would then fall under the jurisdiction of two counties. For example, Wheeling would have to develop a new sanitary sewer system since the Metropolitan Sanitary District will not allow sewers from Lake County to connect into its system.

Lang, however, said such problems could be worked out if the village decided to move northward. "Evidently Buffalo Grove seems to be making out pretty well in two counties," he said.

Meanwhile, Wheeling is continuing to annex property in unincorporated Cook County. The village board tonight will consider a request to annex a large parcel of land on McHenry Road east of Cedar Run and west of Whippletree Village.

CONSTRUCTION OF A 1-million-gallon addition to the reservoir at Well No. 2, 525 N. Arlington Heights Rd., is expected to be completed in four to five months. The addition is needed so the village can provide an adequate supply of water to every home, even during drought periods.

Will increase availability of water

Reservoir addition being constructed

A one million gallon addition to Buffalo Grove's reservoir on Arlington Heights Road in Lake County, which will increase the availability of water, is now under construction and will be completed in four to five months.

The underground reservoir, adjacent to Well No. 2 at 525 N. Arlington Heights Rd., has a capacity for 500,000 gallons of water. Two years ago when the reservoir was built it was designed so that its capacity could be increased when the village began using more water.

Officials said when the addition is completed it will be connected to the existing reservoir.

Public Works Director William Davis said the additional storage space is needed in order to provide an adequate amount of water to each home, even during drought periods. He said additional storage facilities are needed because pumps on the five village wells cannot keep up with demand during high usage periods.

THE VILLAGE uses about 2 million gallons of water a day. This amount, however, increases substantially during summer months. The worst times are usually the weekends when more residents sprinkle lawns and wash cars, Davis said.

With the fall and winter coming, residents will probably have no difficulty with low water pressure. However, Davis said residents should start noticing a difference in their water pressures during dry periods next year because of the addition to the reservoir.

The goal of the reservoir and all improvements to the water system is for residents to get the same water pressure all year round, he said. Other improvements to the water system are planned in the next two years to insure this, he added.

INCREASING THE reservoir capacity will also assure that firemen have an adequate supply of water in the event of a serious fire.

If an equipment breakdown occurs at Well No. 2, the added capacity of the reservoir will give work crews more time to make repairs before the reservoir runs out of water. In most cases, work crews will have 48 hours to make repairs before they will be forced to hook into another well, Davis said.

Work on the reservoir which is being done by Bulley and Andrews Inc. started last month. The contract states the project should be completed within 168 days. For every day over the 168 day limit a penalty of $100 will be assessed to the contractor. The project is expected to be completed on time.

The cost of the reservoir was expected to be $188,642. The contractor, however, said last week there were some unanticipated soil problems and the reservoir now will cost an additional $7,610.

Installation-damaged land to be restored

Parkways, driveways and curbs damaged in July, while connecting the village with the new sewage treatment plant in Lake County, will be restored this fall, officials said recently.

The area in front of several homes on Farrington Drive was torn up to install an interceptor sewer. The sewer intercepts sewage which formerly went to the village's treatment plant on Farrington Drive and diverts it to the new plant on Pekara Drive near Milwaukee Avenue in unincorporated Vernon Township.

When the Lake County plant was opened the village's was closed.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said the sidewalks in the area have already been replaced. Officials said the work was not done immediately because the ground needed time to settle before concrete could be poured. The same holds true with planting of grass, the officials said.

All driveways, lawns and curbs that have been damaged will be restored to its original condition, Larson said. He said lawns that were sodded, will be re-sodded, while homes with lawns planted from seed will be reseeded.

Check your $20s...

Two bogus $20 bills were passed recently at Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank, 4 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

The two bills, both series 1969A, were similar to phony $20 bills found in Highland Park and Glenview. Discovery of the bills was Tuesday.

Wheeling police have given their information to federal authorities.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said. "But I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be out-moded in a few years."

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers.

SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Her very own leather-goods shop in Long Grove

It's a dream come true... what more need be said?

by REGINA OEHLE

Marta Vaenberg had a dream. Like her father before her, she wanted independence, a business of her own.

So the Argentine immigrant sewed from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day for 10½ years, saving her money. Her eyes grew weaker and her children grew older.

Finally, last month a dream came true and Mrs. Vaenberg, 33, opened a small shop. And every day at 4 p.m. her husband, Gregorio, takes charge of the shop, Bon Voyage, and she goes home to fix dinner and act as the housewife.

"I HAVE A Spanish education," Mrs. Vaenberg said. "First comes the home, husband and children."

But with a $10,000 investment, Mrs. Vaenberg left the security of an established, if small, sewing and alterations business in the confines of her home to realize a dream.

"If I don't do it, in the back of my mind, I am a failure," she said. This way, she explained with what she calls "mine funny accent," if she fails, she will at least have tried.

"It was a big risk, and I have many sleepless nights," she said, adding that her husband encouraged her. "He's an optimist."

HER FIRST goal was to open a small dress shop. "But if I open a fashion shop, I know I would start sewing again," she said. Because her eyes were becoming increasingly worse, she opened a leather shop.

"I love the smell of leather," she said. And spending ten hours in the shop doesn't tire her out as much as six hours of sewing did, she added. "I was very tired of sewing."

Two years after making the decision and waiting for the right shop, she found a place. Mrs. Vaenberg said that when she and her husband saw the store, they weren't even looking for a place. They had just stopped for a cup of coffee.

Two days later, they rented the store and started buying. Most of the furnishings, except for two glass cases, were made by her husband.

"WE WERE trying to save a little money," she said. Gregorio, Vaenberg, whose professional name is Ross, works with wood as a hobby, making pictures and furniture.

Along part of the back wall is a high priced selection of original wood pictures and trays. Mrs. Vaenberg said her husband has stopped making the pictures, and she really doesn't want to sell the items. "I wanted to use them mostly for decoration," she said.

THE BEGINNING was a little rough, she admits. Everything had to be prepaid in cash. She said retailers have started giving her credit. Now she can order by phone and has thirty days to pay and "things are going perfect."

In buying, she uses instinct. "I don't care what they tell me, I know what I want," she said. "Until now, I sell everything that I bought."

Florence Knop

Funeral services for Mrs. Florence Knop, 73, nee Baum, a resident of Arlington Heights for about 10 years, will be held today at 10:30 a.m. in the chapel of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights. The Rev. Kurt Grother of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, will be officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Evergreen Park.

Mrs. Knop, who was born in Chicago, Feb. 2, 1901, died Saturday morning in Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, after a lingering illness. A past president of the Women's Auxiliary of M.O.P.H., she had been a resident of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights, for four months.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Ruth (Nicholas) Derocates of Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Elaine (Dr. Frank) Paska of Arlington Heights; three granddaughters: two sisters, Mrs. Marion Koranda and Mrs. Bertha Clark; three brothers, Hon. Harry and Joseph Baum; many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, Charles.

Halter Funeral Home, Arlington Heights, is in charge of the funeral arrangements.

To concentrate on businesses and industries

United Fund hopes to raise $12,000

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund will kick off its annual fund-raising drive today with hopes of raising $12,000 this year.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said, however, the funds collected locally will only be part of the United Fund money used to support community groups. "That is our local goal," he said. "The campaign will be receiving back over $14,000 from the metropolitan campaign. So our total support to the community agencies will be over $26,000."

This year's goal is up $2,000 from last year's target of $10,000. Bauer said that although the campaign fell about $30 short of its goal last year, this year's goal is higher "because of the increasing need in the community."

BAUER SAID the campaign will concentrate on local business and industry this year, an area of the community not tapped in previous years. "We've got a more extensive campaign than we had in the past, especially in the industrial areas," he said.

According to Bauer, the campaign is also taking into consideration the fact that many residents now donate to the United Fund where they work. Several fund drives in other communities had trouble with their fund-raising last year because of people donating at work.

This year's drive, however, will continue to appeal to the area residents through an extensive letter campaign. Bauer said residents should begin receiving letters from the United Fund this week.

In addition, the United Fund is planning a McDonald's Day with the cooperation of the drive-in restaurant at 168 E. Dundee Road. Half of the proceeds from sales on Oct. 15 will be donated to the local campaign.

BAUER SAID his group is also considering a balloon sale later this fall, but plans are not yet definite. Thermometers will be posted in both Wheeling and Buffalo Grove to keep residents informed of the progress of this year's campaign.

Money raised by the United Fund will be used to support nine local agencies. Organizations receiving funds this year include Omni House-Youth Services Bureau, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, the Northwest Suburban Homemakers Service, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Northwest Mental Health Center and the Salvation Army Family Counseling Center.

"All the monies that are collected locally will stay locally," Bauer said. "Anything that we raise in the community will stay in the community."

THE UNITED FUND president added that most organizations supported by the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove group provide services for area youth.

"The major thrust that we feel we're providing this year is to the kids," he said.

Although this year's campaign officially begins today, Bauer said the drive will continue through the year until the goal is met.

Next village blood drive Oct. 17 at St. Mary's

The Buffalo Grove Blood Donor Commission is planning its next drive for Oct. 17 at St. Mary's Church.

The village blood program provides free blood replacement anywhere in the country for all residents of a community if 4 per cent of its residents donate one pint of blood each year. Buffalo Grove's population is about 10,000, so about 760 pints of blood are needed each year.

Although the entire village is now covered under the program, officials said continued donations are needed to assure future eligibility.

Although the eventual community commitment is 4 per cent, the free blood replacement program goes into effect as soon as one-half of 1 per cent of the residents donate. The community must then donate at a rate of 1 per cent each quarter.

Sixth Roundtable set for tonight

Buffalo Grove will hold its sixth President's Roundtable tonight in place of the regular village board meeting. It will begin at 8 in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

The sessions were initiated by Village Pres. Gary Armstrong to give citizens and community leaders an opportunity to meet with the village board on an informal basis. Residents are invited to discuss their opinions and ideas concerning anything pertaining to the village.

Former trustee Edward Fabish, who is chairman of tonight's session said the only rule is that residents display a positive and constructive attitude toward what is discussed.

IN ADDITION to the village program, there is also one for organizations such as St. Mary's. It operates the same way except that a pint of blood must be donated by 20 per cent of its members each year in order for every member to be eligible. The blood donated toward the organization also counts toward the community goal.

If the community or organization falls short of its requirement, individuals who have donated and their immediate families are still eligible for free blood replacement.

Persons eligible under the program will be given as much blood as they need for as long as they need it.

Joel Johnson, director of donor recruitment for the North Suburban Blood Center (NSBC) which is administering the program, said although the October drive is primarily for members of St. Mary's Church, 75 N. Buffalo Grove Rd., residents of the village at-large will be permitted to donate if an appointment is made in advance. The drawing will be between 4 and 9 p.m.

Johnson said the goal for the drive is 170 pints of blood.

DONORS MUST BE between 18 and 65 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds. Persons who have had hepatitis are not eligible to donate. Those who have had other diseases or who have been on medication recently may have to wait a certain period of time before becoming eligible.

Persons are eligible to donate every eight weeks to a total of five times a year.

Persons interested in donating blood should call Harold Gianopoulos at 537-4422; Carol Lauter at 541-4640 or Wayne Winter at 537-6965.

School building additions bids to be opened

The Dist. 21 school board will open bids for $1.8 million in building additions to the district's three junior high schools at a special meeting tomorrow night.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at London Junior High School, 1001 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Contracts for the work are expected to be awarded Thursday at the regular Dist. 21 school board meeting. Construction will probably begin in October.

The planned additions will increase the number of classrooms in each building as well as provide areas for a new vocational arts program.

Construction at Holmes will include the addition of a lunch room and at London Junior High, a library-learning center will be added. This will make the two schools equal to Cooper Junior High in facilities.

Dist. 21 Assistant Supt. John Barger has said the district hopes to begin construction about 30 days after the contracts are awarded. The work is scheduled to be completed in time for the new facilities to be used for the 1974-75 school year.

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes totating $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service

More than 100 attend meeting

Teachers set Oct. 15 as strike vote day

by LINDA PUNCH

The East Maine Education Association (EMEA) set Oct. 15 as a strike vote day following a two-hour teacher's meeting last week.

Half day of school for River Trails

Students in River Trails Dist. 26 will be dismissed after half a day of classes today to allow teachers to attend a workshop.

All elementary pupils will be dismissed at 11:30 a.m. Students at River Trails Junior High School will be released at 11:30 a.m.

The decision to take the vote came after an emotional discussion on whether teachers would back EMEA proposals. More than 100 Dist. 63 teachers attended the meeting.

"I think we know what we want, but do the other teachers support the same thing?" one woman asked. "We only have about one-third of the teachers here."

"I don't see the purpose of saying 'yes, we'll back you,' if we're not really able to," another woman added.

SEVERAL TEACHERS also expressed fears that if the strike vote failed, the school board would gain the upper hand in negotiations.

"If we decide not to strike, we're backing off completely. We won't get anything out of the board," one teacher said.

Joe Anderson, a representative of the Illinois Education Association (IEA), denied one woman's contention that by setting the strike vote day teachers "have voted to strike."

"THERE ARE a number of steps before you strike — setting a date is just one of them," Anderson said. "Don't say you voted to strike when you didn't."

Anderson said there are "a lot of things" teachers could do in the next few weeks to ward off a strike, including soliciting parental support.

"If you've learned anything, you know that when you go to the parents on this issue, they're for you," he said.

EMEA President Henry O'Neill said the Oct. 15 strike vote day would correspond with similar action in neighboring school districts. Last week, the township teachers unions discussed the possibility of a township-wide "march for education" on that date.

The October date also gives the EMEA negotiating team time to "actually get down to brass tacks" with the school board. The negotiating teams of the school board and EMEA are scheduled to meet Sept. 25.

TEACHERS also seemed concerned about school board reprisals if the union did strike.

"Some friends of mine in another district went on strike and got nothing from it. It tore the schools right down the

Ecology group can seek funds—if state OKs it

The Citizens for a Better Environment (CBE) will be allowed to solicit funds in Des Plaines if they can provide documentation that the Illinois Attorney General has approved the group.

The activist group has locked horns with Des Plaines and three other towns charging in a federal law suit that the communities violated the group's constitutional rights.

In Des Plaines, City officials state that the group has not complied with all sections of the solicitors ordinance and therefore, cannot be granted a permit.

DES PLAINE'S corporation counsel Robert DiLeonardi told Federal District Court Judge Richard McLaren Friday that if the group provided a statement from the Illinois Attorney General's office reporting the group is in compliance with all state laws, a solicitation permit would be granted.

DiLeonardi said that the group had provided a letter from the attorney general stating the company was registered with the state, but he noted the letter was written in 1971.

"Certainly CBE can provide something more current," he added.

However, Philip H. Bizar, an attorney for CBE, said while the group is still registered with the state, the attorney general will not provide a new written statement.

A SPOKESMAN for the charitable trust division of the attorney general's office confirmed Bizar's report. He said the group is registered and that their annual report is on file.

"The report is open to the public, but we do not send out written statements because it would be impractical," the spokesman said.

Bizar contended that Des Plaines was not as stringent with other charitable groups as it has been with the CBE. DiLeonardi contended that all groups had to comply with the city's ordinances.

Judge McLaren noted that the group has not been denied permission to solicit by Des Plaines and stated that it is still their responsibility to comply with local regulations.

THE CBE SUIT was filed in July after Des Plaines police told members of the group that they could not canvass the community for funds seeking donations to finance environmental projects. The group had not acquired a permit from the city.

Last month, McLaren refused to grant the CBE request for a temporary injunction against the four towns involved. He said "no irrevocable harm or injury was being caused CBE."

Besides Des Plaines, CBE has also filed suit against Morton Grove, Cicero and LaGrange.

Man, 23, drowns in Lake Opeka

A Des Plaines man drowned early yesterday in Lake Opeka, Touhy and Lee streets.

Mark Cleveland, 23, of 2050 Pine Dr., was pronounced dead at Holy Family Hospital after his body was pulled from the lake by scuba divers.

Two fishermen saw Cleveland walk into the lake shortly before 8:30 a.m. Sunday. After seeing him surface several times and then go under, they called the Des Plaines Fire Department.

Firefighters in boats searched the lake. They were assisted by diving teams from Rosemont, Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights, according to reports.

Two professional scuba divers, Ray Rasane, Melrose Park, and Brandt Burger, Chicago, were also called into the search. Rasane, a member of the Illinois Scuba Rescue and Recovery Club, and Burger, a scuba instructor at the Park Ridge YMCA, recovered the body at 9:15 a.m. In the exact spot the fishermen said Cleveland went down.

According to Des Plaines police, the body was taken to Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, where funeral arrangements will be made. A coroner's inquest will be held sometime this week, police said, but no foul play is suspected.

Cleveland was married and had no children.

Project: Predict deciphers kidtalk

by REGINA OEHLEH

Words like "wa-wa" can create a learning barrier between a child and his kindergarten teacher, according to Maine Township's Project: Predict Director Richard Framke.

One of the major problems the learning disabilities center faces is language development, Framke said. Many children have simply never bothered to learn the correct pronunciation of words since they can communicate with their families in "babytalk."

Though the family understands the child's babytalk, outside people can't. These children have difficulty communicating in the classroom, have problems with homework and can begin a career of failure that will haunt them throughout their student life.

THE IDEA BEHIND Project: Predict, one of the two experimental programs for three- and four-year-olds in the country, is to help children before they face their first failures.

Children are tested at the project center and some are held for further testing. Those that have learning problems, physical or emotional, can enter Predict classes. No cost is involved.

Last school year, out of 880 students tested, or about one-third of the student populations in districts 62, 63 and 64, only 43 children entered the program.

THE FIRST YEAR of operation was "highly successful," Framke said. The second year of classes is just starting. Last year's students will be tested later this fall to find out if Project: Predict has helped them.

Framke said that although he has no figures available as yet "Our staff agrees that there has been a significant improvement in the children's behavior and skills as a result of this program."

"We're changing all the time because it's an experimental program," Framke said. Helping develop the program are the National College of Education, Northwestern University, University of Illinois and Circle Campus of the University of Illinois.

THE PROJECT people have developed somewhere from 4,000 to 5,000 objectives for their students. All the objectives won't apply to each student, Framke said. "It's the most thorough set of objectives anybody's ever had," he added.

Framke said research indicates children who have learning problems will improve more rapidly at an early age when they haven't faced repeated failures in the classroom.

"Lots of kids can do lots of things if no one tells them they can't," he said.

Some children have physical problems the program either tries to correct or help the child overcome. Other children simply haven't had enough learning experiences, Framke said.

"Today's society almost seems to prevent kids from exploring," Framke said. When parents take their children grocery shopping, they place the child in the cart seat especially made for the youngster. The child can't touch anything.

FRAMKE THINKS the children should be allowed to touch objects, and find out for themselves about shape and materials. "I don't care if he drops that syrup bottle," he said, "at least he knows that glass breaks."

Part of the Predict program is just letting children touch things, such as combs, soap and other common items. "We're giving an experience to the child that our society has eliminated from the normal environment."

Words like sharp, dull, hard or round don't become part of a child's vocabulary until the child has experienced them. "The concepts we take for granted, children have to experience," he said.

wants. Children still use baby language because it's adequate for communications.

Maine Township parents can have their children tested through their local schools. Framke pointed out that children are not forced to enter the program; they join only if the parents want them to join. He also said the project tests both normal and problem children for statistical and comparison purposes.

Exam for service academies Saturday

Qualifying examinations for entrance to United States service academies will be Saturday for 10th Congressional District residents, U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, announced.

Testing will be at two locations: Main Post Office, 1101 Davis St., Evanston, and the United Church of Christ, 1492 Henry Ave., Des Plaines. Exams begin at 8:30 a.m.

Tests are open to male high school graduates between the ages of 17 and 22 who are interested in applying to any of four academies: the U.S. Military Academy, U.S. Naval Academy, the U.S. Air Force Academy, or the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

Those interested in taking the tests may obtain information and applications by contacting Young's district offices, 9701 N. Kenton Ave., Skokie and 770 Lee St., Des Plaines.

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IPEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IPEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers.

SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Bakalis wants to go out by cutting the red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1973, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be out-moded in a few years."

GROUP ACTIVITIES are combined with individualized activities during Project: Predict classes. The program operates out of Oakton School, Park Ridge, and serves children from all over Maine Township, including Des Plaines. Arrangements for testing can be made at any local school. Screening is conducted throughout the school year.

New school bd. chief to speak

Dr. John Fridlund, newly appointed School Dist. 26 superintendent, will speak Tuesday to PTA groups at River Trails Junior High School and Indian Grove School.

The River Trails meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. Fridlund is expected to speak early in the meeting to allow him to attend the Indian Grove session shortly after 8 p.m.

Fridlund was named by the school board last week to replace former superintendent Tom Warden who resigned last May. He is expected to take over about the middle of October.

Fridlund, 49, comes to Dist. 26 from Oak Park, where he served as director of business affairs of School Dist. 97. Prior to that, he was superintendent of School Dist. 98 in Berwyn.

A graduate of De Paul University, Fridlund received both his master's and doctorate degrees from Northwestern University.

A resident of Itasca, Fridlund is married and has three children.

PTA notes

Chippewa parents will be given the opportunity to assume the role of students in order to see classroom methods firsthand on Tuesday, Oct. 2, at 7:45 p.m. The faculty of Chippewa will conduct parents through a condensed schedule somewhat similar to the daily schedule of the students. Each teacher will discuss the work of his class and how he is trying to accomplish it.

A brief meeting of the Chippewa Organization of Parents and Educators, COPE, will be held at the close of the last period to vote on the 1973-74 proposed budget.

The first meeting of Maine East's Parent-Teacher Council for the 1973-74 school year will be held today at 8 p.m. in the Maine East auditorium.

Discussion will center around "getting to know Maine East better." Programs for the coming year will be planned at this meeting.

PTC president Paul Dahlgren, Niles, commented, "Our only membership fee is the parents' time and interest."

Oakton expenses rise by $5.7 million

Operating expenditures will be about $7.2 million this year at Oakton Community College, an increase of about 26 percent over last year's expenses of $5.7 million.

Most of the increase in expenditures is $1.4 million budgeted by college officials as a deposit on a site for a permanent campus.

Revenue for this year is estimated at about $6 million in addition to a surplus of about $4 million left over from budgets in previous years. The tax rate will be lower by one half cent this year making the rate 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Enrollment at Oakton increased by 27 percent this year and 3,700 full and part-time students are now registered for the fall term.

2:15 p.m., with babysitting provided. Call your service unit chairman or Mr. Tompkins, 437-4398, for details.

Girl Scout adults will want to save Oct. 4 and Oct. 9 for the training in outdoor skills held at Northwestern Park Woods shelter. Mrs. Archie Beck will be in charge.

Register at least four days prior to the course or call 824-6466.

Mrs. Richard Tompkins, community chairman in Des Plaines, call 437-4398 or Miss Denayer, 824-2134.

The senior girl scouts from Troop 64 will continue their visits to Brookwood Convalescent Home to entertain and treat the residents. When bingo is played the girls furnish the prizes and serve refreshments.

The senior girls will be joining with the Cadettes for a family picnic Sept. 29.

This group will be helping assemble the material for the Des Plaines Community Chest residential mailing during the evenings of the last week in September. They have been giving this community service for a number of years.

O'Neill said the concerns expressed by teachers were "reasonable."

"They're the kind of concerns (Dist. 63's Allan) Gogo is betting you're going to have. Gogo is betting teachers have no guts," O'Neill said.

"You have to stand up and say we're too good to face the unreasonable, arbitrary and dictatorial moves placed upon us," he added.

The Dist. 63 board and EMEA are clashing over the teacher's union's proposal that teachers have a voice in setting working conditions. Teachers are asking that class size and other conditions be part of their contract.

Other courses of action approved by the teachers include picketing and attendance at school board meetings, picketing of open house nights and teacher attendance at the negotiation meeting.

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes to tally $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Devon-53

To annex the 267-acre development or not? That's the question facing village trustees

by FRED GACA
A News Analysis
(First of two parts)

"Devon-53" — It's a short name for a big decision.

Tomorrow night, the Elk Grove Village Board of Trustees begins work on that decision, should the village agree to annex the proposed 267-acre, 13,129 population housing project.

From its inception, the project has caused controversy in the village:

- A petition of 1,300 signatures has been submitted against the project.
- The Village Plan Commission, after conducting the most expensive public hearing in the village's history, has recommended against annexing the project.
- The developers have charged they were promised village approval of the project before they began work on the plan.

- Village officials have denied any agreement was made between the village and the developers.

Against the opposition, the developers have threatened to seek zoning from Cook County for their project. Most of the land proposed for the development is unincorporated and could be developed under county zoning which permits a much higher density than the village.

THE CITIZENS group submitting the petition opposing the project said it would fight against any attempt by the developers to get county zoning. They have called on village officials to oppose the project.

If the developers received zoning from Cook County, the project would be built on the village's doorstep without the village having any control over it.

One of the developers, Parkway Development Co., already has county zoning for high-density, multi-family buildings for their portion of the project. The village unsuccessfully fought the granting of county zoning.

Other developers of the project are Joseph Zizzo, Buttila Land Trust, and Joseph Arvidson of Arvidson Construction Co.

TOMORROW NIGHT, the village board will receive the recommendation from the plan commission to reject the annexation of the property. The board must make the final decision and the commission's recommendation is only an advisory one. The board is not required to follow the recommendation.

Board action is not expected at tomorrow's meeting.

Devon-53 is a planned unit development of single family homes, quadruminums, apartment buildings, some as high as 12 stories, and commercial businesses. The project would be built on three large tracts west and southwest of the village.

The first section is north of Devon Avenue and east of Interstate 90. The second section is north of Devon Avenue, west of Interstate 90 and east of Rohlwing Road. The third section is north of the first two. It is west of Rohlwing Road and north of Nerge Road.

STATISTICS ON the project are awesome compared to anything in Elk Grove Village — 91 single family homes; 90 quadruminums with a total of 360 units; four 12-story apartment buildings with a Proposed rents for senior housing project high?

The village housing commission and the League of Women Voters have attacked the proposed Elk Grove Village senior citizen housing project as being economically unfeasible for senior citizens.

The groups charge the project will not be able to fulfill its original goal of providing low-cost housing for the elderly. They contend most elderly persons will not be able to live there and the development may become another conventional apartment complex.

Eugene Callahan, vice president of the M. Myers and Associates development company, replied to the criticism by saying the project was the best low-cost housing available for the elderly considering the government's freeze on rent subsidies.

would pay only $50 rent, no matter what unit he was living in.

Residents in the 200 apartment units not subsidized would have to pay full rent.

Both the housing commission and the League of Women Voters said the rents for unsubsidized apartments are comparable to rents charged for conventional apartments in the area and are beyond the budgets of most senior citizens living on small, fixed incomes.

THE GROUPS recommended against the proposed project unless low-rent apartments were available for the entire development.

The village plan commission, which conducted the hearing, did not have time Thursday night to discuss the testimony presented. The commission is expected to discuss the matter at its Thursday meeting.

M. Myers and Associates' problems with the development began when the federal government stopped rent subsidy programs for senior citizen housing last January. Late last year, when the developers began work on the project, the government had funds.

Callahan said the developers then sought funds from IHDA for a low-cost construction loan.

IHDA AGREED to the loan, but only if the age limit were lowered to 55. The housing commission and League of Women Voters contend the lower age limit was demanded because IHDA does not feel enough senior citizens can be attracted to the development and the apartment would have to be rented to younger persons able to afford them.

Callahan said the project was designed for senior citizens and such projects typically attract residents far older than the minimum age limit.

As large as Woodfield Mall

Sears warehouse, store planned here

A Sears, Roebuck and Co. warehouse and retail store, as large as the Woodfield Shopping Mall, is planned for Elk Grove Village.

The two million square foot building would be constructed on the southeast corner of the Devon Avenue-Busse road intersection. Sears reportedly has purchased the 90 acre site and plans to start construction by next spring.

The warehouse would be built in three phases, over about 10 years. The first phase, if construction started in the would be finished by early 1975.

BEFORE STARTING work, Sears wants a commitment from the village that Pan-Am Boulevard will not be extended west across Busse Road and into the Elk Grove Industrial Park. In an extremely short-notice demands, Sears told the village last week that if the commitment not to extend Pan-Am was not received by this week, the company will abandon the project and locate elsewhere.

An extension of Pan-Am Boulevard would run through the proposed Sears building.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis has recommended the village drop its plan to extend the boulevard. He presented his recommendation to the village plan commission at its meeting Thursday.

Willis said Pan-Am apparently will not be extended between Busse Road and York-Elmhurst Road, even if Sears did not build, because ownership disputes of certain land parcels prevent the village from obtaining necessary right-of-way.

He said the industrial uses near Pan-Am Boulevard have no desire to extend the road because it now adequately serves their needs.

THE PLAN commission was notified of Sears' request as a "courtesy," said Willis.

He said the site is now zoned for warehouse construction and a building permit could be issued without consulting the commission.

The board of trustees would have to give Sears the guarantee that Pan-Am Boulevard would not be extended.

THE PLAN COMMISSIONERS objected to the short notice given by Sears for a decision on Pan-Am Boulevard and said they would have liked to have had more time to study the project, especially the impact on traffic congestion.

Willis described the warehouse as completely automated, using computers and conveyor belts to transport merchandise. Although the building would employ an estimated 2,000 workers very few would be involved with physical moving of goods.

The warehouse would serve as the company's national distribution point for all clothing items.

The retail sales portion of the building would cover 35,000 square feet.

Willis said property taxes the village would gain from the building would be "enormous". Additional tax revenue would also be generated from the sales tax on retail sales.

New 'stamps by mail' postal service ahead

"Stamps by Mail," a new postal service which will permit customers to purchase stamps and stamped envelopes by mail, will be available in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and Elk Grove Village beginning Oct. 1.

The service will be especially beneficial to shut-ins, the elderly and working people who cannot go to the post office, said Arlington Heights Postmaster Robert J. Proebstle.

Customers use a special order form and envelope for ordering stamps. The post office will accept only checks or money orders for the amount of purchase and will charge a 40 cent fee to defray the cost of two-way postage and other costs.

Leaflets with details of the new service will be distributed this week to area households and small businesses.

For further information, please call your area post office: Arlington Heights, 253-7456; Rolling Meadows, 255-8474, and Elk Grove Village, 439-5573.

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said, "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers.

SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Bakalis wants to go out by cutting the red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said.

Michael Bakalis

"If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be outmoded in a few years."

Township officials award $40,000

U.S. funds going to mental health

A $40,000 share of Schaumburg Township's expected $189,000 federal revenue sharing funds will go to the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Center.

Schaumburg Township Supervisor Vernon Laubenstein said the center's request for funding was reviewed by the township's revenue sharing committee and received its favorable recommendation.

Shelter Inc., a newly-chartered youth care facility, asked for $5,000, and also received the committee's approval.

Laubenstein said Jordan Rosen, director of the health center, showed reports of actual case loads citing a significant increase of Schaumburg Township cases. At present, the center treats 242 cases, some of them whole families.

ROSEN'S REQUEST for funding indicated the township's share of expenses is estimated at $35,896, if the estimated growth curve continues as it has.

Laubenstein said the committee selected the $40,000 figure. The actual allocation is expected to be approved Wednesday when the board of auditors meets.

Shelter Inc. seeks to provide temporary shelter within the township for young children who are temporary wards of the court due to family accident or court action.

At a previous meeting, the revenue sharing committee heard the Schaumburg Township Public Library's request for funds. It will recommend a $30,000 allocation, said Laubenstein.

ALTHOUGH the township is accepting requests for funding now, and has made three commitments, it has not actually received this period's allocation.

Laubenstein said reports from the federal government show the township will receive the first portion of the $189,000 by Oct. 5.

In the last allocation period, the township received approximately $103,000, all but $10,000 of which has been allocated to various agencies.

total of 792 units; 64 smaller apartment buildings with a total of 5,010 units; 20 three-story buildings with a total of 240 units. Total living units: 6,493.

The project, estimated to cost $180 million, would be built in phases, covering an eight to 12 year period. When completed, the project's estimated population of 13,129 would increase the village's present population by more than 50 per cent.

In order to annex the property, the village would have to modify its zoning ordinances to permit construction of a building 12 stories high, allow a density of 30 units per acre, reduce the requirement for parking spaces from two per unit to 1.5 per unit and reduce the requirements for common open space.

DEVON-53 BEGAN in the late 1960s when the four individual planners purchased the property now proposed as the site. Each approached the village with a plan to build an individual housing project.

The village board of trustees suggested the four developers join together and develop the project under a common plan. Just how the suggestion was made is disputed by at least one of the developers and Charles Zettek, village president.

Joseph Arvidson said at one of the plan commission meetings he could not understand why the commission was taking so long to make a recommendation on the project. He said the developers came together with the understanding that a density of 28 units per acre would be accepted. The proposed density is below the 28 unit figure.

Zettek denied any agreement had been arranged with the developers. He said the developers wanted a density of 40 or more units per acre and the village trustees screamed. The trustees suggested 14 units per acre and the developers screamed.

ZETTEK SAID the 28 units per acre density was the figure that "caused the least amount of screaming."

He said, however, the trustees only told the developers to draw up a common plan, no commitment was made on any density figure.

The developers hired Rolf Campbell and Associates to do the planning for the entire project.

Campbell may be involved in a conflict of interest, especially if the project is rejected by the village and zoning from the county is sought.

Several years ago, Campbell was the planner for Elk Grove Village. At that time, he developed a plan for the village which called for single family homes in the Devon-53 area.

WHEN HIRED by the developers, Campbell then planned the medium and high-rise buildings with increased density for the area. When asked at plan commission hearings on the project why he had changed the planning for the area, he said circumstances have changed and the multi-family dwelling was now more appropriate for the land.

He said the project would give a more desirable "housing mix" to the community.

Campbell is also being retained by the Cook County zoning department as a consultant. His firm is now involved in a complete revision of the county zoning ordinance.

ROBERT DILEONARDI, attorney for the developers, has said that if the project does go to the county and the possibility of conflict of interest arises, a new planner would be used.

Dileonardi is the former attorney for Des Plaines and is now retained by the city as a legal consultant.

In mid-1972, the plan for Devon-53 was presented to the village. Shortly after it was presented, the opposition to it began to mount. That opposition resulted in one of the most extensive and expensive public hearings ever held by the village.

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes to-taking $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,800 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service

Bonds dating to 1920s return to haunt taxpayers

Palatine homeowners may find themselves paying $1 or $2 more in taxes soon for debts incurred by the village government in the 1920s.

Last week, village officials discovered that attorney Herb Lesser is holding old special assessment bonds that Lesser claims are worth $97,000. The bonds were issued in the 1920s for street improvements and other projects, but the Depression interrupted the redemption process.

Six years ago, the Palatine board faced a similar situation for more than $30,000 in 1920s bonds. A court decision and subsequent appeal ruled that the village had to honor the bonds, and a special judgment funding bond was passed to pay off the old bonds. During the first year after the court ruling, taxpayers with homes assessed at $10,000 paid an extra $1.70 to pay the debt. That tax levy continued through this year.

IF THE $97,000 claims appears accurate, the village will probably issue more judgment bonds to pay Lesser, unless Village Atty. Bradley Glass can find grounds that would convince the courts that the village should not honor the bonds.

In the 1960-70s case, the village's main argument against paying the bonds was "that they waited too long," Glass said. The courts rejected the village's view that the bondholder had not sued within a reasonable amount of time in this case 10 years, to make the claim equitable.

Numerous problems plagued the village and its bondholders in the 1920s and '30s. Initially, land was forfeited to the state during the Depression and was taken off of the village's tax roles. During that time, the village was unable to honor the bonds because they had too little tax revenue.

LATER, WHEN private owners purchased the land back from the state, the increased tax revenue was not used to pay the bondholders.

"As a trustee of the bonds, it (the village) is supposed to, as the money comes in, pay it out pro-rate," Glass said. For example, if the village takes in $1,200 in the special assessment fund, and there are a total of three bondholders to be paid, each would receive $400 although the bonds have a face value of $1,000 each.

"The village paid it just to one or two bondholders when the money came in, instead of paying pro-rate," Glass said.

Now, the village is virtually helpless to control or predict when the bonds will be turned in.

"THEY CAN determine how many bonds are outstanding, but they can't know where they are," Glass said. The village has no record of who holds the 1920s special assessment bonds.

"I was amazed to find out how many communities are facing this problem," Glass said. "It's pretty hard to do anything about it now."

Unless the village engages in another court battle, trustees will have to decide how to repay the bonds if Lesser's claims are valid. More judgment bonds seem to be the answer.

"I would recommend that we take it over a period of time to make the impact quite small," Jones said. "I just don't think we should pay for it out of our on-going operation budget. And if we tried to pay for it out of one year (budget), it would cause all sorts of problems," Jones added.

No decision will come until village Auditor David Veatch reviews Lesser's claims to determine their value. If they are worth $97,000 and Glass decides against another court test, village trustees will have to act to repay the half-century-old debt.

Committee to ask zone, site OK for Westbury

A joint planning and zoning commission tonight will urge the Hoffman Estates Village Board to approve zoning and the site plan for the proposed Westbury planned-unit development, with two members dissenting.

Although the village board is under an Oct. 1 deadline to act on tonight's recommendation, Village Atty. Edward Hofert will ask Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson 2 p.m. today to extend the time limit. If Judge Robson denies the request, it is likely the board tonight will schedule at least one special meeting this week.

The commission voted Saturday to recommend approval of the 497-acre development, in the northern section of the village along Palatine Road and in Palatine Township. But the acceptance was not without strings.

PLAN COMMISSION members attached to their approval 14 demands for changes in the plan, and even then one commissioner voted against the proposal.

Michael Redmond warned his colleagues that, "it is very important to us that we do not sell zoning," citing as the price settlement of the $1.5 million legal action against Hoffman Estates.

That suit charges the village with fraud in obtaining special assessments for public improvements when the land was owned by the now-defunct City Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

"We should not let the litigation that faces this village be a concern to us and alter our judgment," Redmond added.

ZONING BOARD members listed 40 changes they seek in the zoning ordinance that, if approved, will allow the large development. "With the recommended changes, it (the project) is in the public interest of the residents of the village and is not solely for the interest" of the developer, they determined.

The zoning board approval was in the face of a "no" vote from its chairman, Robert Valentino, who refused to explain his vote until tonight's meeting. He said he would respond to questions from the village board, but otherwise would not "issue a minority report."

Redmond said he opposed the project because of concerns over health, safety and welfare stemming from flooding, drainage, water supply, traffic and high density. Plan Commission Chairman Richard Regan agreed that the plan should "stand on its own merits divorced from the litigation."

"But it (the legal suit) is there," he noted.

Donald Kirk, president of Meridian Housing Corp., which is proposing the project, refused to comment on the demands set by the joint commission, their potential cost or whether his firm would be willing to comply.

Firm offers to survey noise levels here

The question of noise pollution in Palatine, which quieted down last spring after the village board refused to budget money for a noise survey, is making itself heard again.

Palatine's Union Oil Co. of California has volunteered to make a noise survey in the village free of cost. Chuck Jeffries, a Union Oil employee and member of Palatine's Environmental Control Board, said the survey will be conducted sometime in the near future, but no definite date has been set.

The planned survey would probably measure airplane noise levels, traffic noise, and some other areas such as loud lawnmowers, minibikes, people practicing on electric guitars and air conditioners, according to Palatine Health Director Richard Dawson.

"We don't know exactly what the (noise) problem is," said Dawson.

JEFFRIES SAID the survey might lead to a noise pollution ordinance, which was requested last January in a petition presented to the village board.

The petition, submitted by a Harper College student, had 85 signatures and asked the village to curb noise and sound disturbances from trucks traveling through Palatine.

Presently, the only noise ordinance on the books refers to industrial areas. There is no law for residential areas.

If a law were passed, enforcement would demand some means of measuring noise levels. This means an expenditure for both equipment and training, Dawson said.

No estimate on the possible cost of a noise control program is available. Jeffries said the equipment and training costs could vary from a few hundred to a several thousand dollars, depending on the type of equipment the village bought.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be outmoded in a few years."

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC and the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers. SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "It is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Her very own leather-goods shop in Long Grove

It's a dream come true... what more need be said?

by REGINA OEHLE

Marta Vaenberg had a dream. Like her father before her, she wanted independence, a business of her own.

So the Argentine immigrant sewed from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day for 10 1/2 years, saving her money. Her eyes grew weaker and her children grew older.

Finally, last month a dream came true and Mrs. Vaenberg, 33, opened a small dress shop. "But if I open a fashion shop, I know I would start sewing again," she said. Because her eyes were becoming increasingly worse, she opened a leather shop.

"I HAVE A Spanish education," Mrs. Vaenberg said. "First comes the home, husband and children."

But with a $10,000 investment, Mrs. Vaenberg left the security of an established, if small, sewing and alterations business in the confines of her home to realize a dream.

"If I don't do it, in the back of my mind, I am a failure," she said. This way, she explained with what she calls "my funny accent," if she fails, she will at least have tried.

"It was a big risk, and I have many sleepless nights," she said, adding that her husband encouraged her. "He's an optimist."

HER FIRST goal was to open a small dress shop. "But if I open a fashion shop, I know I would start sewing again," she said. Because her eyes were becoming increasingly worse, she opened a leather shop.

"I love the smell of leather," she said. And spending ten hours in the shop doesn't tire her out as much as six hours of sewing did, she added. "I was very tired of sewing."

Two years after making the decision and waiting for the right shop, she found a place. Mrs. Vaenberg said that when she and her husband saw the store, they weren't even looking for a place. They had just stopped for a cup of coffee.

Two days later, they rented the store and started buying. Most of the furnishings, except for two glass cases, were made by her husband.

"WE WERE trying to save a little money," she said. Gregorio, Vaenberg, whose professional name is Ross, works with wood as a hobby, making pictures and furniture.

Along part of the back wall is a high priced selection of original wood pictures and trays. Mrs. Vaenberg said her husband has stopped making the pictures, and she really doesn't want to sell the items. "I wanted to use them mostly for decoration," she said.

THE BEGINNING was a little rough, she admits. Everything had to be prepaid in cash. She said retailers have started giving her credit. Now she can order by phone and has thirty days to pay and "things are going perfect."

In buying, she uses instinct. "I don't care what they tell me, I know what I want," she said. "Until now, I sell everything that I bought."

PTA notes

The Jane Addams PTA will sponsor a hot pretzel sale after school on Thursday and Friday. The pretzels cost 20 cents each.

The annual fun fair of the Pleasant Hill PTA will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the school gymnasium, 434 W. Illinois.

The Hunting Ridge PTA is sponsoring the first of four book fairs on Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. and in the evenings during Parent Orientation Nights at the school, 1105 W. Illinois.

Funds from the book sale will be used to purchase books and audio-visual equipment for the school's resource center.

The next book fair will be in November and anyone who would like to help with it should contact Mrs. Vincent McIntyre at 358-9219.

Supt. Frank Whiteley will speak about the highlights of School Dist. 15 at the first meeting of the Plum Grove PTA tomorrow at 7:30 p.m.

The superintendent's address will be followed by a presentation by Don Rago and Jean Fliser acquainting the parents, students and teachers with the services of the Bridge Youth Service Bureau, a program of the Palatine Township Youth Committee. The Bridge is a crisis intervention and counseling service where young people with various concerns go for assistance.

Tennis lessons offered by parks

Group tennis lessons will be offered beginning Oct. 1 for residents of Palatine Township by the Salt Creek Park District. One hour lessons will be offered for six weeks in the morning and afternoon for beginners, advanced beginners, and intermediates.

Cost is $20 for adults and $22 for junior players. Junior players may also join the junior tennis league. For further information, call the district at 259-6890.

Police chief candidates trimmed from 21 to 15

The field of police chief applicants to lead the Palatine department has narrowed from 21 to 15, as an expanded five-man search committee prepares for personal interviews with the candidates Oct. 2 and 4.

John D. Madl, director of the Police Services Bureau with the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police in Arlington Heights, will join the original committee for the interview sessions.

The committee was expanded to include another representative of the area police chiefs. Other members of the committee include chairman Joseph M. Kiszka, deputy superintendent of Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15; Herman Hertog, executive director of the Buehler YMCA; Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calkwood, and Palatine Acting Village Mgr. James Bennett.

Six of the candidates were weeded out after committee members reviewed all the applications, Kiszka said Friday. He explained that those candidates did not meet the qualifications set in the village's prospectus.

KISZKA WOULD not say whether or not Palatine's Acting Chief Frank Ortiz or Lt. Harold Nehmsow were among the men eliminated. The committee had earlier said it would not accept applications from Palatine men, because the village board had stated it wanted an outside man to pull together the factions existing in the Palatine department. That stand was reversed last month to avoid possible charges of discrimination in hiring.

The search committee did say that the two Palatine men would not be eliminated solely because they are from the local department.

Once the interviews are complete, the committee is expected to recommend one or two final candidates to Bennett and the village board. The search has been in progress since July, shortly after the controversial forced resignation of former chief Robert R. Centner. Centner now is working as a lieutenant on the Palatine force.

Teacher negotiations to resume tonight

Teacher contract negotiations in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 will resume in closed session tonight after a four month recess.

Negotiations were stopped May 30 after only four sessions without a settlement. Salaries are the major obstacle.

Teachers' salaries are currently frozen at last year's level, pending ratification of the 1973-74 contract.

Albert J. Gieren

Funeral Mass for Albert J. Gieren, 56, of 863 Walnut St., Des Plaines, was said Saturday in St. Mary Catholic Church, Des Plaines. Burial was in All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Mr. Gieren, who was an attorney with offices at 10 S. LaSalle St. in Chicago, died Thursday in Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, after a short illness. A veteran of World War II, U. S. Army, he was born in Chicago, Sept. 5, 1915.

Surviving are his widow, Rita, nee Morper; four daughters, Mrs. Kathryn (Anthony) Des-Plaines of Chicago, Mrs. Mary (David) Haskins of Mount Prospect, Mrs. Judy (Robert) Habetler of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Dorothy Gieren of Des Plaines; a son, Albert Jr., of Des Plaines; six grandchildren; and mother, Mrs. Ann Marie Gieren of Chicago.

Family requests, memorial donations may be made to the Chicago Heart Association or masses preferred.

Oehler Funeral Home, Des Plaines, was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Stella Krysh

Mrs. Stella Krysh, 55, nee Fikura, of 310 W. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights, died Saturday in Resurrection Hospital, Chicago. She was born Aug. 10, 1918, in Chicago.

Visitation is today from 2 to 9:30 p.m. in Lauerburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 3000 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Funeral Mass will be said at 10 a.m. tomorrow in St. James Catholic Church, 831 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights. Burial will be in St. Adalbert Cemetery, Niles.

Preceded in death by her husband, George L., survivors include two sisters, Mrs. Lillian (Stephens) Lofko of Arlington Heights, and Mrs. Irene (Walter) Winkowski of Chicago.

Family requests, in lieu of flowers, masses preferred or contributions may be made to the Cancer Fund.

Corinne Kiske

Funeral services for Mrs. Corinne Kiske, 63, nee Lesperance, of Sun City, Ariz., will be held at 10:30 a.m. today in Alhagin and Sons Funeral Home, 201 N. Northwest Hwy., Palatine. Entombment will be in Memorial Park Mausoleum, Skokie.

Mrs. Kiske, who was born in Illinois, March 4, 1888, and formerly of Chicago, died Thursday in Sun Valley Nursing Home in Sun City, Ariz. She was preceded in death by her husband, Arthur W.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Mildred (Charles) Ebert of Sun City, Ariz., and Mrs. Lois (Donald) Koehler of Schaumburg; two grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Family requests, in lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the family.

The Almanac

Today is Monday, Sept. 24, the 267th day of 1973 with 98 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

John Marshall, fourth chief justice of the United States, was born Sept. 24, 1755.

On this day in history:

In 1855, President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered a heart attack while vacationing in Colorado.

In 1859, President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev met at Camp David, Md.

In 1971, retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black died at the age of 85.

In 1972, a private jet plane crashed into a Sacramento, Calif., ice cream parlor, killing 22 persons, most of them youngsters.

A thought for the day: President Eisenhower said, "In the final choice, a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chains."

In Federalist assembly

Catherine Key, 218 W. Slade, will be taking part in the World Federalists USA Regional Assembly in Chicago, Sept. 29. The association's goal is to seek peace through establishing enforceable world laws.

ILLINOIS TRAFFIC SAFETY ALERT

Drive Alert In Illinois

It's a Great Place to LIVE

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes totaling $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery bulls such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMont, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMont are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMont had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Other plans also to be considered

Zone commission to weigh nursing home proposal

Several special zoning commissions, including one that will consider a plan to build a nursing home for the elderly on Kirchhoff Road west of Ill. Rt. 53, will be appointed by the Rolling Meadows City Council tomorrow.

The council is expected to pass a resolution forming a special zoning commission that will consider a plan by Koskamp Enterprises to build a 100-unit, one-floor sheltered care facility on three acres off Kirchhoff Road.

Another resolution calls for the creation of a special zoning commission to hear a plan to build a Kentucky Fried Chicken store on Plum Grove Road near Euclid Avenue.

THE MEETING will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall, 3000 Kirchhoff Road.

Both plans were first presented to the council's Building and Zoning Committee last week. Robert Koskamp, who with two brothers owns Koskamp Enterprises, told the committee the firm had purchased six acres of land on either side of 4300 Kirchhoff Road, only half of which is located in the city limits.

Koskamp, whose firm presently runs six nursing care homes under the title of Sheltered Care Village, Inc., told the committee the facility would be built on the three acres of land on the north side of Kirchhoff Road in the city limits.

The land must be rezoned for the project, since it is presently zoned for single family homes.

The committee reluctantly agreed to recommend the formation of the commission after four if its members told Koskamp the city council would not likely approve the plan.

THE FOUR aldermen present at the meeting said residents in the single-family area surrounding the proposed site would probably object strongly to the plan. The aldermen said if residents in the area opposed the plan, the council could be expected to turn down the project.

The city council must give final approval on all rezoning and annexation proposals.

The council also is expected to consider a plan to contribute to funding for a traffic light at the intersection of Plum Grove Road and Euclid Avenue. The Cook County Highway Department plans to install the light as part of road improvement work next year. The department has asked the city to contribute 75 per cent of the cost of maintenance and electricity for the project after the light is installed.

Cost of the project is not yet known.

A big-as-Woodfield Sears outlet planned at Centex

A Sears, Roebuck and Co. warehouse and retail store, as large as the Woodfield Shopping Mall, is planned for Elk Grove Village.

The two million square foot building would be constructed on the southeast corner of the Devon Avenue-Busse Road intersection. Sears reportedly has purchased the 90 acre site and plans to start construction by next spring.

The warehouse would be built in three phases, over about 10 years. The first phase, if construction started in the would be finished by early 1975.

BEFORE STARTING work, Sears wants a commitment from the village that Pan-Am Boulevard will not be extended west across Busse Road and into the Elk Grove Industrial Park. In an extremely short-notice demands, Sears told the village last week that if the commitment not to extend Pan-Am was not received by this week, the company will abandon the project and locate elsewhere.

An extension of Pan-Am Boulevard would run through the proposed Sears building.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis has recommended the village drop its plan to extend the boulevard. He presented his recommendation to the village plan commission as its meeting Thursday.

Willis said Pan-Am apparently will not be extended between Busse Road and York-Elmhurst Road, even if Sears did not build, because ownership disputes of certain land parcels prevent the village from obtaining necessary right-of-way.

He said the industrial uses near Pan-Am Boulevard have no desire to extend the road because it now adequately serves their needs.

THE PLAN commission was notified of Sears' request as a "courtesy", said Willis.

He said the site is now zoned for warehouse construction and a building permit could be issued without consulting the commission.

The board of trustees would have to give Sears the guarantee that Pan-Am Boulevard would not be extended.

THE PLAN COMMISSIONERS objected to the short notice given by Sears for a decision on Pan-Am Boulevard and said they would have liked to have had more time to study the project, especially the impact on traffic congestion.

Willis described the warehouse as completely automated, using computers and conveyor belts to transport merchandise. Although the building would employ an estimated 2,000 workers very few would be involved with physical moving of goods.

Elk Grove man critical after 3-car accident

An Elk Grove Village man was listed in critical condition yesterday after a three-car accident early Saturday morning at Golf and Arlington Heights roads in Arlington Heights.

Richard L. Kinsey, 18, of 167 Tottenham Ln., Elk Grove Village, is in the intensive-care unit with head injuries at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Kinsey was a passenger in an auto driven by Steven Sprague, 25, of Schiller Park.

According to Arlington Heights police, Sprague was turning left onto Golf Road from the southbound lanes of Arlington Heights Road when he was struck by an oncoming car, driven by Carol Landreth, 19, of 2500 George St., Rolling Meadows.

Sprague's car skidded on impact into a third auto, which was stopped on Golf Road for a red light. The third vehicle was driven by William Darman, 31, of 3200 Owl Dr., Rolling Meadows.

Miss Landreth and Sprague were treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital. The accident occurred at 12:34 a.m.

Sprague was ticketed for failure to yield the right-of-way while making a left turn.

New 'stamps by mail' postal service ahead

"Stamps by Mail," a new postal service which will permit customers to purchase stamps and stamped envelopes by mail, will be available in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and Elk Grove Village beginning Oct. 1.

The service will be especially beneficial to shut-ins, the elderly and working people who cannot go to the post office, said Arlington Heights Postmaster Robert J. Proebstle.

Customers use a special order form and envelope for ordering stamps. The post office will accept only checks or money orders for the amount of purchase and will charge a 40 cent fee to defray the cost of two-way postage and other costs.

Leaflets with details of the new service will be distributed this week to area households and small businesses.

For further information, please call your area post office: Arlington Heights, 233-7456; Rolling Meadows, 235-8474, and Elk Grove Village, 439-5373.

Coin exhibition slated

A coin show, sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Association and the Arlington Heights Area Coin Club, will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Featured in the show will be rare coin, medal and currency exhibits. More than 50 trophies will be awarded. There will also be a special award for junior and senior exhibitors invited from clubs in Illinois, northern Indiana, and southern Wisconsin.

The event will be held in the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center mall, on Kirchhoff Road and Meadow Drive.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be outmoded in a few years."

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers.

SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Leonard Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Committee to ask zone, site OK for Westbury

A joint planning and zoning commission tonight will urge the Hoffman Estates Village Board to approve zoning and the site plan for the proposed Westbury planned-unit development, with two members dissenting.

Although the village board is under an Oct. 1 deadline to act on tonight's recommendation, Village Atty. Edward Hofert will ask Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson 2 p.m. today to extend the time limit. If Judge Robson denies the request, it is likely the board tonight will schedule at least one special meeting this week.

The commission voted Saturday to recommend approval of the 497-acre development, in the northern section of the village along Palatine Road and in Palatine Township. But the acceptance was not without strings.

PLAN COMMISSION members attached to their approval 14 demands for changes in the plan, and even then one commissioner voted against the proposal.

Michael Redmond warned his colleagues that, "It is very important to us that we do not sell zoning," citing as the price settlement of the $1.5 million legal action against Hoffman Estates.

That suit charges the village with fraud in obtaining special assessments for public improvements when the land was owned by the now-defunct City Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

"We should not let the litigation that faces this village be a concern to us and alter our judgment," Redmond added.

ZONING BOARD members listed 40 changes they seek in the zoning ordinance that, if approved, will allow the large development. "With the recommended changes, it (the project) is in the public interest of the residents of the village and is not solely for the interest" of the developer, they determined.

The zoning board approval was in the face of a "no" vote from its chairman, Robert Valentino, who refused to explain his vote until tonight's meeting. He said he would respond to questions from the village board, but otherwise would not "issue a minority report."

Redmond said he opposed the project because of concerns over health, safety and welfare stemming from flooding, drainage, water supply, traffic and high density. Plan Commission Chairman Richard Regan agreed that the plan should "stand on its own merits divorced from the litigation."

"But it (the legal suit) is there," he noted.

Donald Kirk, president of Meridian Housing Corp., which is proposing the project, refused to comment on the demands set by the joint commission, their potential cost or whether his firm would be willing to comply.

Golf tourney results

Helen Johnson won the ladies division of the Rolling Meadows Park District Handicap Golf Tourney at Arlington Park Towers Golf Club. Second place went to Pat Kammerer.

Ken Appelhans won the men's division in a nine-hole playoff after being tied for first with Herb Schneider and Ernie Plazal.

The first and second place finishers received trophies in the first annual tournament.

High winds Friday night apparently caused the collapse of a steel-and-concrete-reinforced frame of the Levitz Furniture Store at Rohlwing Road and Northwest Highway in Rolling Meadows.

No estimate of the damage was available following the accident. The furniture store was the first Chicago area outlet for the Pennsylvania-based Levitz Co.

The building was 36 feet high and occupied 167,000 square feet of the 11-acre site. The property recently was annexed to Rolling Meadows.

Spokesmen for the store had predicted that the outlet would have sales totaling $12 million a year. A completion date had not been set for the store.

No other wind damage was reported by area police.

Township attorney 'good' after stroke

Palatine Township Atty. Francis Kelly, 55, is reported in good condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, after suffering a stroke last week.

He was admitted to the hospital Tuesday morning. Kelly was appointed township attorney last spring, and also serves as township highway attorney.

Swim, exercise at Buehler Y

Swimming, exercise classes and bridge games are a few of the new programs being offered at the Buehler YMCA in Palatine this fall.

Swimming instruction for almost all age groups is offered daily. Special courses, such as synchronized swimming, springboard diving, beginning through advanced competition swim instruction, scuba diving, junior and senior life saving and handicapped swim instruction are being offered on a limited basis. Cost varies.

Exercise and swimming classes for those over 60 years old will be held at 11:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. This program is free.

Duplicate bridge contestants meet the first and third Monday of each month at 11 a.m. and Thursdays at 7:45 p.m. Free refreshments will be served. Cost is $1.50 per person and $1 for anyone over 60. There is no registration.

Registration for the other classes is open at the YMCA. For more information call 359-2400.

Man, 23, drowns in Lake Opeka

A Des Plaines man drowned early yesterday in Lake Opeka, Touhy and Lee streets.

Mark Cleveland, 23, of 2050 Pine Dr., was pronounced dead at Holy Family Hospital after his body was pulled from the lake by scuba divers.

Two fishermen saw Cleveland walk into the lake shortly before 8:30 a.m. Sunday. After seeing him surface several times and then go under, they called the Des Plaines Fire Department.

Firefighters in boats searched the lake. They were assisted by diving teams from Rosemont, Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights, according to reports.

Two professional scuba divers, Ray Rasane, Melrose Park, and Brandt Burger, Chicago, were also called into the search. Rasane, a member of the Illinois Scuba Rescue and Recovery Club, and Burger, a scuba instructor at the Park Ridge YMCA, recovered the body at 9:15 a.m. in the exact spot the fishermen said Cleveland went down.

According to Des Plaines police, the body was taken to Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, where funeral arrangements will be made. A coroner's inquest will be held sometime this week, police said; but no foul play is suspected.

Cleveland was married and had no children.

PTA notes

The first meeting of the Jonas Saik PTA will be held tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria. There will be an introduction of teachers and a short run-down on school projects and activities scheduled for the coming year.

Supt. Frank Whiteley will speak about the highlights of School Dist. 15 at the first meeting of the Plum Grove PTA tomorrow at 7:30 p.m.

The superintendent's address will be followed by a presentation by Don Rago and Jean Fiesler acquainting parents, students and teachers with the services of the Bridge Youth Service Bureau, a program of the Palatine Township Youth Committee. The Bridge is a crisis intervention and counseling service where young people with various concerns go for assistance.

Teacher negotiations to resume tonight

Teacher contract negotiations in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 will resume in closed session tonight after a four month recess.

Negotiations were stopped May 30 after only four sessions without a settlement. Salaries are the major obstacle. Teachers' salaries are currently frozen at last year's level, pending ratification of the 1973-74 contract.

City will gain two roads

The state of Illinois has approved plans to turn over East and West Frontage roads bordering Ill. Rt. 53 to Rolling Meadows.

Both roads were formerly owned and maintained by the state highway division. When the agreement becomes final, the city will assume control of the roads and maintenance of them.

The city had requested the roads in order to have the power to post traffic signs on them. Several accidents have occurred along the roads but city officials were not able to post speed limit or other traffic signs on the roads because they came under state jurisdiction.

The agreement was presented to the building and zoning committee and will be final upon approval of the city council and signing of the agreement by Mayor Roland Meyer.

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE
For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes totalling $1 million

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMont, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMont are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMont had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Deadline extension for reply sought

Panel to ask zoning, site OK for Westbury

A joint planning and zoning commission tonight will urge the Hoffman Estates Village Board to approve zoning and the site plan for the proposed Westbury planned unit development, with two members dissenting.

Although the village board is under an Oct. 1 deadline to act on tonight's recommendation, Village Atty. Edward Hofert will ask Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson 2 p.m. today to extend the time limit. If Judge Robson denies the request, it is likely the board tonight will schedule at least one special meeting this week.

The commission voted Saturday to recommend approval of the 407-acre development, in the northern section of the village along Palatine Road and in Palatine Township. But the acceptance was not without strings.

PLAN COMMISSION members attached to their approval 14 demands for changes in the plan, and even then one commissioner voted against the proposal.

Michael Redmond warned his colleagues that, "It is very important to us that we do not sell zoning," citing as the price settlement of the $15 million legal action against Hoffman Estates.

That suit charges the village with fraud in obtaining special assessments for public improvements when the land was owned by the now-defunct City Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

"We should not let the litigation that faces this village be a concern to us and alter our judgment," Redmond added.

ZONING BOARD members listed 40 changes they seek in the zoning ordinance that, if approved, will allow the large development. "With the recommended changes, it (the project) is in the public interest of the residents of the village and is not solely for the interest of the developer, they determined.

The zoning board approval was in the face of a "no" vote from its chairman, Robert Valentino, who refused to explain his vote until tonight's meeting. He said he would respond to questions from the village board, but otherwise would not "issue a minority report."

Redmond said he opposed the project because of concerns over health, safety and welfare stemming from flooding, drainage, water supply, traffic and high density. Plan Commission Chairman Richard Regan agreed that the plan should "stand on its own merits divorced from the litigation."

"But it (the legal suit) is there," he noted.

Donald Kirk, president of Meridian Housing Corp., which is proposing the project, refused to comment on the demands set by the joint commission, their potential cost or whether his firm would be willing to comply.

Township officials award $40,000

U.S. funds going to mental health

A $40,000 share of Schaumburg Township's expected $189,000 federal revenue sharing (funds will go to the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Center).

Schaumburg Township Supervisor Vernon Laubenstein said the center's request for funding was reviewed by the township's revenue sharing committee and received its favorable recommendation.

Shelter Inc., a newly-chartered youth care facility, asked for $3,000, and also received the committee's approval.

Laubenstein said Jordan Rosen, director of the health center, showed reports of actual case loads citing a significant increase of Schaumburg Township cases. At present, the center treats 242 cases, some of them whole families.

ROSEN'S REQUEST for funding indicated the township's share of expenses is estimated at $35,896, if the estimated growth curve continues as it has.

Laubenstein said the committee so-lected the $40,000 figure. The actual allocation is expected to be approved Wednesday when the board of auditors meets.

Shelter Inc. seeks to provide temporary shelter within the township for young children who are temporary wards of the court due to family accident or court action.

At a previous meeting, the revenue sharing committee heard the Schaumburg Township Public Library's request for funds. It will recommend a $30,000 allocation, said Laubenstein.

ALTHOUGH the township is accepting requests for funding now, and has made three commitments, it has not actually received this period's allocation.

Laubenstein said reports from the federal government show the township will receive the first portion of the $189,000 by Oct. 5.

In the last allocation period, the township received approximately $103,000, all but $10,000 of which has been allocated to various agencies.

Construction woes to delay fire station

Selection of a proper brick mortar color has added to the construction woes of the new Hoffman Estates Fire Station near Higgins Road and Governors Lane.

Deputy Chief Ed Kalasa said the completion of the fire station may be pushed back as much as two months because of the mortar delay and the 14 month setback caused by lack of steel supports. The station may be finished by April 1974 instead of the projected February, Kalasa said.

He added he was hoping to have construction begun before bad weather set in and had projected the station "to be under roof" by Dec. 1.

Township GOP split into 3

Schaumburg Township Republican Committeeman Donald L. Totten has announced appointments of deputy committeemen to lead three regional divisions of the party, each designated by the colors of the American flag.

The Red deputy is Glen Hoffman of Hoffman Estates, White region deputy is Scott MacEachron of Schaumburg and Blue deputy is Bill Hogan of Hanover Park. Each regional chairman will be assisted by three area chairmen. The Red region includes 17 precincts, while each of the other two includes 18.

Area chairmen in the Red region are

Bob Lyons, Ed Hennessy and Richard Regan, all of Hoffman Estates. In the White region, they are Phil Klek, Karl Schroeder and Pete Wing, all of Schaumburg. Blue region area chairmen are Brian Carey of Elk Grove, Bill Hommon of Hanover Park and a third person yet to be named.

The party realignment will strengthen lines of communication and establish areas of responsibility, Totten said. It "is also intended to promote competition between the various regions and areas," he said.

Business zoning for Olde Towne

Rezoning of a half-acre site on Schaumburg Road will result in a carpet and home furnishings store being the first business in Schaumburg's proposed Olde Towne district.

Trustees approved an ordinance this week which rezones property at 105 E. Schaumburg Rd. from R-6 (residential) to B-1 (business). The property, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Manzardo, is one-eighth of a mile east of Roselle Road.

The Manzardos plan to convert a house on the property to a retail sales outlet for carpet, draperies and home furnishings. They have operated Homestead Carpet in Weathersfield Commons for three years.

THE PROPERTY is within the proposed Olde Towne district which extends one-quarter mile in each direction of the Roselle-Schaumburg roads intersection. Guidelines for the district, which will consist of buildings designed in the style of the early 1900s, are being prepared by the village plans commission.

In other action Tuesday, trustees approved:

- Establishing and posting speed limits in all planned unit developments.

- State standards for minimum sanitary requirements for all private residential swimming pools used by more than one family.

- Annexation of a 183-acre parcel to be developed as a 522 single-family home area by Levitt & Sons.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend education, we had to require a lot of things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in in the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be out-moded in a few years."

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC AND the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers.

SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would bank the game with more than just talk.)

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes totaling $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or whatever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners. $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Sanitary sewer backup threat

$25,000 approved for MSD repair fund

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) has approved up to $25,000 in emergency repairs to prevent sanitary sewer backup into hundreds of Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village houses.

The MSD has found that a 15-foot section of the Upper Des Plaines Intersecting Sewer, which lies along Busse Road, has moved about 10 inches. MSD engineers fear this shifting of the 36-inch sewer may cause it to break, disrupting the movement of sewage to the Weller Creek sewer.

"Such an event will affect the public health, in that sanitary sewer service would be interrupted, causing an immediate backup to basements," said Raymond R. Rimkus, MSD chief of maintenance and operations. Rimkus asked the MSD Board to approve the repairs, which the board did last week.

The repairs are to be made no later than Oct. 31.

ELK GROVE Village Engineer Donald Ciglia said the whole northeast section of the village is served by the Busse Road sewer. If it breaks, he said, "There'll be a lot of sewage all over the streets."

According to Ciglia, this area of Elk Grove already has been experiencing sewage backups during heavy rains. He said he thinks the downward movement of the sewer line may be partially responsible for the backups. The sewer line is in a surcharged condition currently.

Bernard Hemmeter, Mount Prospect village engineer, said all houses in the southwest portion of the village from Lincoln Street south would be affected if the line breaks. This would include the subdivisions of Colonial Heights, Kaplan-Braun, Mount Shire, Elk Grove Villa and Lake Briarwood.

The shift in the sewer line, first noticed visually and then confirmed by television inspection on Aug. 14, is in the area of 410 Busse Rd. This is just south of Lincoln Street.

Hemmeter said the repairs may make necessary the closing of a section of Busse Road for a week or so.

St. John Lutheran Church notes 125 years

ST. JOHN LUTHERAN Church of Mount Prospect, 1100 Linneman Rd., celebrates its 125th anniversary this year. Highlight of the celebration, which begins Sept. 30, will be dedication Oct. 28 of the new, larger addition to the St. John school building. The church is the oldest in the village.

by TOM VAN MALDER

Mount Prospect's oldest church turns 125 years old this fall.

St. John Lutheran Church has stood on the same 20-acre site at 1100 Linneman Rd. since the Linnemann family donated the land in 1848. Descendants of the Linnemann family are still church members, and now attend the third church building to stand on the site.

From its small beginning, St. John has grown to where the congregation now numbers almost 600. Homesteading German farmers, including Friedrich and Johanna Busse, founded the church in 1848. A cemetery, containing the graves of many early pioneers, lies near the church.

Until 1938 the church was called St. John Evangelical Lutheran Church of Elk Grove. Then the current name was selected.

In 1839 a fire destroyed the parsonage and the church's business records. A new facility was built shortly after at a cost of $430.

In 1863, the church received its first pipe organ and a schoolhouse was built the following year. The school has subsequently been torn down. The steeple was added in 1874, as was the 1,000-pound bell.

A second schoolhouse was built in 1901, and is now abandoned because it fails to meet fire safety regulations for schools. The Mount Prospect Historical Society is negotiating for permission to use the old schoolhouse as a museum. Final approval must come through a vote by the congregation.

A third school building was built in 1959 and a new addition to that building opened this month.

IN HONOR of the church's 125th anniversary, guest speakers have been scheduled for Sunday services Sept. 30 through Oct. 21. On Mission Jubilee Sunday, Sept. 30, the Rev. Edmond Happle, president of the Northern Illinois District, will be guest speaker.

Other speakers will be the Rev. James Bousman of Immanuel Lutheran Church, Des Plaines, on Oct. 7, Synod Sunday; the Rev. John Sternberg of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Schaumburg, on Oct. 14, Christian Education Sunday; and the Rev. Erwin Paul of St. John Lutheran Church, Forest Park, vice-president of the Northern Illinois District, on Oct. 21, Stewardship Sunday.

Services are at 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. each Sunday.

Dedication of the new school building will be held after the 10:30 a.m. service Oct. 28. A dinner in the lower level of the new building will follow.

The Rev. W. B. Streufert has been pastor at St. John for the last 17 years. Warren S. Ford has been school principal for five years.

Kenroy 'toys' with plans for Rob Roy golf course

Kenroy officials have not yet decided on the development plan they want for the Rob Roy Golf Course.

"We're toying around with various plans," Bill Dillon, of the Skokie development firm, said Friday. He also said the firm will probably ask for a continuance in Thursday's scheduled rezoning hearing for the 180-acre golf course.

Kenroy Inc. has a contract agreement to purchase the Rob Roy Golf Course from the McDonald Family Trust. Kenroy has petitioned Mount Prospect for annexation and apartment zoning under a planned unit development.

Under the requested zoning, Kenroy could build as many as 4,600 apartments and townhouses on the golf course and the adjacent northern half of the Rob Roy Driving Range. Dillon said the number of building units his firm will ask for has not yet been determined. The number apparently varies in the different plans under consideration.

Thursday's hearing is set before the Zoning Board of Appeals. Any continuance would be until an October meeting of the zoning board.

MEANWHILE, THE village is continuing its investigations into the possibility of purchasing the golf course so it may be maintained as open space. The village board has met once with the River Trails Park District in executive session to discuss a possible joint purchase effort. A second executive session is set for Oct. 2.

The park district has a court case pending in which the southern half of the driving range, owned by Kenroy, is being condemned for park usage. An agreement between Kenroy and the park district on a sale of the southern half was scrapped after Mount Prospect village trustees failed to annex the northern half and rezone it for apartments.

Kenroy officials have said they will give Mount Prospect every chance to explore purchasing the golf course before they start building or seek rezoning from the Cook County Zoning Board. In their agreement with the McDonald Family Trust, a March 15, 1973 deadline has been set. If Mount Prospect's approval has not been won by then, Kenroy is to seek rezoning from Cook County or Wheeling.

Guilty plea gets probation

A 29-year-old Schaumburg was placed on two years' probation after he pleaded guilty Friday in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court to a charge of public indecency.

David J. Maga, 18 S. Waban Court, Schaumburg, was arrested by police after he walked around in an office on East Northwest Highway in Mount Prospect on June 20 without any pants.

In other court cases, three youths charged with the attempted theft June 10 of a Good Humor Inc. ice cream truck from the Mount Prospect Plaza were all ordered to see a psychiatrist. The case of Paul A. Bauer, 17, of 1229 S. Belmont Ave., Arlington Heights; Gregory A. Plonke, 18, of 755 Dulles Rd., Des Plaines; and Daniel J. Rocksted, 17, of 221 S. School St., Mount Prospect, was continued to Nov. 2.

John W. Olson, 20, of 1006 Moki Ln., Mount Prospect, was placed on supervision until April 19, 1974 on charges of possession of marijuana.

Shoplifters grab fur-trimmed coats

Two shoplifters got 15 fur-trimmed children's winter coats from a rack Wednesday at Goldblatt's Department Store, 1084 Mount Prospect Plaza.

Police said the two men threw the coats, valued at $450, into the trunk of a car before being driven away by a woman. Another woman was also believed to have been in the car. The incident occurred at 6:30 p.m.

Police said they are investigating the vehicle's ownership.

Courts expected to decide on Cook County wheel tax

A ruling by the Illinois Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the Cook County wheel tax is expected this fall, possibly in November.

The court heard arguments on the wheel tax case last week. The county is appealing a lower court ruling that the tax is unconstitutional, a ruling that came in a suit brought against the tax by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

PHIA Pres. Jack Gilligan said he feels confident the lower court ruling will be reaffirmed. The lawsuit was filed because the tax was felt to be unlawful as it was levied only against residents of unincorporated areas, even though all county residents would benefit from the collected monies.

The wheel tax ordinance was adopted by the Cook County Board on Dec. 30, 1971. It established a tax of $5 a year for motorcycles and motorbikes; $10 a year for cars with less than 35 rated horsepower; and $15 for cars with more than 35 rated horsepower. Trucks are taxed on a sliding scale ranging from $15 to $95 a year.

By March, 1972, however, more than 15 homeowner groups had organized a protest against the tax. The lawsuit followed in April. Funds collected through the tax have been held in escrow, pending the suit's outcome.

The county wheel tax is patterned after municipal vehicle stickers.

Florence Knop

Funeral services for Mrs. Florence Knop, 72, nee Baum, a resident of Arlington Heights for about 10 years, will be held today at 10:30 a.m. in the chapel of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights. The Rev. Kurt Grotzinger of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, will be officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Evergreen Park.

Mrs. Knop, who was born in Chicago, Feb. 2, 1901, died Saturday morning in Northwestern Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, after a lingering illness. A past president of the Women's Auxiliary of M.D.P.H., she had been a resident of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights, for four months.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Ruth (Nichols) Derentz of Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Elaine (Dr. Frank) Paula of Arlington Heights; three grandsons; two sisters, Mrs. Mariann Koranda and Mrs. Bertha Clark; three brothers, Ben, Harry and Joseph Clark; many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, Charles.

Funeral Home, Arlington Heights, is in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Albert J. Gieren

Funeral Mass for Albert J. Gieren, 58, of 563 Walnut St., Des Plaines, was held Saturday in St. Mary Catholic Church, Des Plaines. Burial was in All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Mr. Gieren, who was an attorney with offices at 10 S. LaSalle St. in Chicago, died Thursday in Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, after a short illness. A veteran of World War I, U. S. Army, he was born in Chicago, Sept. 8, 1915.

Surviving are his widow, Rita, nee Morpess; four daughters, Mrs. Kathryn (Anthony) Desant of Chicago, Mrs. Mary (David) Hinkins of Mount Prospect, Mrs. Judy (Robert) Habeler of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Dorothy Gieren of Des Plaines; a son, Albert Jr. of Des Plaines; six grandchildren; and mother, Mrs. Ann Marie Gieren of Chicago.

Family requests, memorial donations may be made to the Chicago Heart Association or masses preferred.

Funeral Home, Des Plaines, was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

New school bd. chief to speak

Dr. John Fridlund, newly appointed School Dist. 26 superintendent, will speak Tuesday to PTA groups at River Trails Junior High School and Indian Grove School.

The River Trails meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. Fridlund is expected to speak early in the meeting to allow him to attend the Indian Grove session shortly after 8 p.m.

Fridlund was named by the school board last week to replace former superintendent Tom Warden who resigned last May. He is expected to take over about the middle of October.

Fridlund, 49, comes to Dist. 26 from Oak Park, where he served as director of business affairs of School Dist. 97. Prior to that, he was superintendent of School Dist. 98 in Berwyn.

A graduate of De Paul University, Fridlund received both his master's and doctorate degrees from Northwestern University.

A resident of Itasca, Fridlund is married and has three children.

Half day of school for River Trails

Students in River Trails Dist. 26 will be dismissed after half a day of classes today to allow teachers to attend a workshop.

All elementary pupils will be dismissed at 11:30 a.m. Students at River Trails Junior High School will be released at 11:30 a.m.

The Almanac

Today is Monday, Sept. 24, the 267th day of 1973 with 98 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

John Marshall, fourth chief justice of the United States, was born Sept. 24, 1755.

On this day in history:

In 1959, President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev met at Camp David, Md.

In 1972, a private jet plane crashed into a Sacramento, Calif., ice cream parlor, killing 22 persons, most of them youngsters.

A thought for the day: President Eisenhower said, "In the final choice, a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chains."

State would apparently be the biggest winner in lottery

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gov. Daniel Walker last week proposed a plan whereby funds from an Illinois lottery and other sources would help finance a regional transit authority. If the lottery idea is approved, past records show Illinois residents would back the game with more than just talk.

by BARRY SIGALE

For the average gambler, a lottery is a very poor investment, unless, of course, he is running it.

Consider this: In Michigan, where one of the most successful of the six state lotteries in the country is held, five million persons weekly vie for top prizes to tailing $1 million.

Twenty thousand of these persons win a minimum prize of $25, or, one of every 250 entrants. An average of 10 persons a week, or two per million hopefuls, win super prizes of between $10,000 and $200,000. One of every 1,000 of the $25 winners yearly is eligible for the half-dozen granddaddy jackpots including the top prize of $1 million.

Taking this into account, it would seem the average person would stay away from indulging in such games of chance, the odds being so overwhelming. Not so.

Because it is inexpensive to purchase a lottery ticket — 50 cents — and because of man's incessant dream to become an instant millionaire, the lottery has become a most popular gamble and an even more popular source of revenue for state governments.

STATEWIDE LOTTERIES have been instituted in New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Connecticut as well as Michigan. Now Illinois politicians are discussing the idea of starting one in this state.

Officials have questioned estimates of just how beneficial a lottery would be to Illinois and argued where the money could be put to best use. Another argument centers around the morality of using income derived from gambling to support mass transit, education or what-ever.

Michigan's experience typifies what Illinois might come to expect if the state legislature passes a lottery bill and the governor signs it.

Since Michigan's first lottery drawing Nov. 24, 1972, $100 million has been spent on lottery tickets by persons from several midwestern states and Canada. Forty-five per cent of this money, or $45 million, has been returned to winners, $10 million has gone for operating expenses while the other $45 million has gone to the state.

THE $45 MILLION in profits has been put in Michigan's general revenue fund which is used to operate all state agencies. The legislature then decides how the money is to be distributed between schools, senior citizen programs, etc.

Any lottery — to be a success — must be supported by the public. This is certain to continue. Just mention to lottery buffs such names as Arthur Schell of Lincolnwood, and Joseph Sullivan and Daniel DuMong, both of Chicago, and they'll dig deeper into their pockets to purchase even more tickets.

Schell, Sullivan and DuMong are among 4,000 Illinoisans who have won over $500,000 in the 10-month-old lottery. Schell and Sullivan each won the $200,000 super prize while DuMong had to settle for the $50,000 payment. So far, there have been 43 persons who have won the $200,000 prize.

Since there is a big interest by Illinois residents to participate in Michigan's lottery it would seem Illinois residents would also rally and support their own state lottery. There is such a great demand for Michigan lottery tickets in Illinois and other states that lottery officials are beginning a subscription service (continued on page 2)

Plan commission approves mixed-housing development

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission has approved plans for the first architectural mixed housing development in the village.

The multi-million Simon — RG Group development will have 350 housing units on a 43.3 acre site at Palatine Road and Rte. 53. The approved plans call for 150 condominium units, 170 townhouses and 30 single family homes.

The project, originally named Chelsen Square, has been in hearings with the commission and the village board for several years. The present developer acquired the site, a former nursery, last year.

The original project called for 600 apartment units on the site. However, homeowners in the Greenbrier subdivision mounted a continuing battle against those plans. The homeowners have reached an accord with the Simon group that calls for buffers of trees and single family homes.

THE SIMON group, plans include a mix of condominiums, townhouses and single family homes within the same development. Prior to this, planned developments were usually confined to one type of dwelling. Joseph Kessler, village planner, termed the project "unique for the Northwest Suburbs."

The new plans have been approved in a rezoning petition by the village board, according to Kessler, pending agreement on several points with the commission.

The major agreements reached between the developer and the commission last week were:

- A variation in the village building height ordinance allowing the condominiums to reach a height of 50 feet, five feet above the limit. The variation was granted to permit use of steel construction materials for the buildings.

- A variation in the ordinance calling for 50-foot radius in cut-de-sacs. The developers were permitted to plan for 45 foot radii.

- Provisions for adequate landscaping to act as a "green zone" buffer between the taller buildings in the project and the single family homes in nearby Greenbrier.

- Approval of tentative plans to build four 75-car garages on land set aside for parking lots for the condominiums.

THE VILLAGE board will decide the fate of the project when it votes on the plans for the entire project. No date was set for board action, but John Best, village planning engineer, said the project would probably come up in October or early November.

The Simon group also agreed to other improvements in their meeting with the commission, including:

- Widening of the frontage road to 24 feet.

- Contributing $7,500 to upgrade and extend an existing flood control basin adjacent to the property.

- Dividing the cost, up to $20,000, of traffic control signal improvements at Palatine Road and Kennicott.

- Dedicating a five-foot sidewalk and a five-foot bicycle path along the frontage road.

- Donate $200 per unit to School District 25 for compensation for the time lag between the time the units are occupied and the time they are entered on the tax rolls.

THE DEVELOPMENT will offer units in the $35,000 to $60,000 price range. According to submitted plans, each townhouse will have an enclosed yard in addition to common grounds.

There also are plans for a club house for the condominium dwellers, as well as a swimming pool and four tennis courts. There will be a flood control basin in the center of the project.

Kessler said neighborhood-type shops and stores might be developed later.

According to the rezoning ordinance passed by the village board earlier, construction for the project will begin by next March and be completed within four years.

Elk Grove man critical after 3-car accident

An Elk Grove Village man was listed in critical condition yesterday after a three-car accident early Saturday morning at Golf and Arlington Heights roads in Arlington Heights.

Richard L. Kinsey, 38, of 167 Tottenham Ln., Elk Grove Village, is in the intensive-care unit with head injuries at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Kinsey was a passenger in an auto driven by Steven Sprague, 25, of Schiller Park.

According to Arlington Heights police, Sprague was turning left onto Golf Road from the southbound lanes of Arlington Heights Road when he was struck by an oncoming car, driven by Carol Landreth, 19, of 2300 George St., Rolling Meadows.

Sprague's car skidded on impact into a third auto, which was stopped on Golf Road for a red light. The third vehicle was driven by William Darman, 31, of 3200 Owl Dr., Rolling Meadows.

Miss Landreth and Sprague were treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital. The accident occurred at 12:34 a.m.

Sprague was ticketed for failure to yield the right-of-way while making a left turn.

Bakalis aim: cut legal red tape

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has said he wants to spend his last year in office eliminating obsolete and unnecessary laws from the state School Code and modifying state rules and regulations to give local school districts more flexibility.

Speaking to members of the Large District Council of the Illinois Association of School Boards at Arlington Park Towers Saturday, Bakalis said he believes lawmakers should start "demanding" in order to provide local governments with more flexibility.

"When public education first started in this country and we were trying to extend things and we had to mandate things and not allow any exceptions," he said. Now, however, the country may be ready "to return to that old Jeffersonian proposition that you can trust people," he said.

BAKALIS, WHO has little more than one year remaining in his term as the state's last elected school superintendent, said he will be working in coming months to modify rules so local schools will have more options while retaining enough control "to take care of the school district that isn't doing its job." In January, 1975, the new state board of education and the superintendent it hires will take over Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he believes the new rules will make use of the "program plan," a controversial innovation that requires all local school districts to draw up a plan for improving education for submission to the state.

"I think the program plan will be the most important thing my office has done during my four years in office," he said. "If I can couple that with the freedom for you (local school boards) to make the plan go, you'll look back in five years and see how important it is."

BAKALIS ALSO said he is beginning to believe the schools should return to "basic education" because of the impossibility of training children for the specific changes that will take place during their lifetimes.

"I have a daughter who just started first grade," he said, "and about all I can be sure of about the world my granddaughter will start school in is the year 2003 is that I don't know anything about it."

He suggested schools may in the future concentrate on basic skills such as reading and writing, while contracting with other institutions, such as business, for specialized "vocational" education.

"I'm in favor of teaching people through vocational education," he said, "but I also ask whether we are really doing the right thing preparing young people for vocations that may be outmoded in a few years."

Sex discrimination among teachers probed at workshop

by KATHERINE BOYCE

It was the day after Billie Jean King trounced Bobby Riggs when 150 Illinois school administrators and board members discussed sex discrimination at a fair employment practices workshop at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

There were expectable jokes about the tennis match and women's liberation in general but school officials stopped smiling when they were told state and federal agencies mean business when it comes to sex discrimination in schools.

Ralph Allen, of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) addressed the audience, noting that few women were present. "Gentlemen, times have changed and we might as well get with it," he said.

THE EEOC and the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission (IFEPC) are two government agencies that investigate employment discrimination cases and enforce state fair employment laws. Representatives from both agencies and from two school law firms were at the workshop to tell school officials the laws apply to them.

Although the agencies investigate all types of discrimination, discussion centered on sex discrimination. "Roughly one third of our charges are based upon sex," said Allen. One of the most frequent charges involves a woman's employment rights while she is pregnant, he said.

"It is the commission's decision that pregnancy be treated like any other illness," said Allen. A pregnant woman must receive sick pay like any employee who breaks an arm or leg, he said, and he also recommended school officials take another look at their employment and sick leave policies.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS later voiced their disapproval in a brief question-and-answer session. One woman told Allen she never considered herself ill when she was pregnant and asked him the basis of the commission's decision.

"I think the word illness is loosely defined," he said. "There is a point in time when she has to be off the job" and at that time she is considered "incapacitated."

Another school official disagreed with Allen, saying "pregnancy is by choice, or usually by a voluntary action, illness is not." He asked who determines when a pregnant woman is incapacitated and whether the school can require her to return to work if she receives sick pay while she is pregnant.

Allen told him to write to the commission's office in Washington, D.C., for a ruling.

"It scares me," said High School Dist. 214 board member Richard Bachhuber, who attended the workshop. "Dist. 214 has never considered pregnancy an illness," he said.

IRENE RAPA, investigator for IFEPC, gave several other examples of sex discrimination in schools. It is discrimination if a woman with preschool children is not hired when a man with preschool children is given the job. Schools cannot divide extra duties like lunchroom or playground supervision between the sexes, nor can they segregate the duties of their custodial workers. SCHOOL ATTORNEY Fred Lifton told the audience, "I do not entirely agree with what's been said," but warned "it is not something to be disregarded. This can be a very serious matter and must be treated like any consequential threat of a lawsuit."

"These people mean business," said school attorney Steward Diamond while pointing to the commission representatives. "We have been guilty in the past of very conscious acts of discrimination," he said, and "the law is strong because we in fact have been guilty."

Veteran Army colonel learns leadership all over again

by KURT BAER

Teaching an ex-Army colonel about leadership might be like trying to show the Easter Bunny how to hop.

George Frank Charlton spent 31 years rising through the ranks of the U.S. Army before retiring as a colonel. Then he joined the Village of Arlington Heights as director of health services and administrative assistant to the village manager.

Charlton, 54, recently was bivouaced for five days at Starved Rock state park where he was enrolled in a very officialy titled seminar class, "A Program of Administrative and Organizational Behavior."

THAT TRANSLATES into something like management-employee relations.

"Ten to 15 years ago, managers were taught to be supervisors and goal setters, and to operate on the assumption that employees were immature," Charlton says.

Frank Charlton

"Good wages and job security were thought to be foremost in importance."

"The message of this course is that good wages and job security do not create satisfaction. More important are social needs, ego satisfaction and self-fulfillment. And as managers, it's our job to create an environment for self-development."

The course at Starved Rock is sponsored by the Illinois Department of Personnel, and financed with money supplied through the U.S. Intergovernmental Personnel Act.

It costs the village nothing to enroll its administrative officials in the seminar which is taught by business management professors from Sangamon State University and private consultants.

CHARLTON IS not the only village official to attend the classes. The building director, fire chief, finance director, engineer, director and assistant director of public works, a police captain and the village planner also have been instructed in the art of modern personnel management.

The program includes discussions on value systems and assumptions about people, motivation and organizational methods, interpersonal communication, leadership, working through and with small groups, job environment, decision making and policy formulation, forces and trends in society bearing on the administrator.

Charlton admits there is a gulf between a management theory that says employees should be self-motivated and self-motivated and the actual working conditions that prevail in the real world.

"If we really believed all this, we'd rip out the time clocks. Our instructors said we should work slowly toward the goals," he says.

Motorola and Texas Instruments were cited as two large companies that have successfully employed the management principles.

There were 26 other state and municipal officials attending class at Starved Rock with Charlton, including four women.

Fall, winter activities for kids at library

A new slate of fall and winter activities for children, ranging from book clubs to creative dramatic workshops, will begin the first week of October at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

New programs this year include a story hour for primary school aged children who are deaf. Called the "AS Club," the program will be held on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month at 1:30 p.m. in the Dunton Room. Children will be told stories through total communication — oral speech, body gesture and expression and sign language.

Another new program, "Soober Saturdays" will begin for children 8 years old or older. The first "Soober Saturday" will be on Oct. 20 with a pumpkin contest. The event is scheduled on the third Saturday every other month.

There will be eight six-week sessions of story time for 3-year-olds. Parents must register their children for the program which meets on Tuesdays or Wednesdays from 10 to 10:30 a.m. The first six-week session begins Oct. 2 through Nov. 6.

EVERY THURSDAY morning, beginning Oct. 4 and continuing through May 31, there will be a story hour for four and five-year-olds. Conducted by members of the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club, the program will start at 10 a.m. A mothers' program will run concurrently in the Dunton Room.

Brief book reviews of books will be featured in book club programs. The Club for children in first through third grades is called "The Lion's Lair" and "The Book-Keepers" club is for fourth and fifth graders.

For junior high school students, creative dramatics and Tree-Players workshops are available. The first creative dramatics session will begin Oct. 29. Both programs require registration.

A "Read 'n' Review" book club and sports film festival programs also are open to junior high school students.

For more details on these programs, persons may call the children's department of the library, 392-0100.

Coronets' tryouts Oct. 7

The Arlington Heights Coronets, a color guard and drill team consisting of 81 girls, will conduct tryouts from 7 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 7 at Arlington High School, 502 W. Euclid, Arlington Heights. All girls from 13 to 21 years old from Arlington Heights and surrounding areas are welcome to attend the sessions.

The Coronets recently received silver medals for winning the Drum Corp International Drill Team Championship last month at Whitewater, Wis.

The Arlington Heights Elks Club, VFW Post 981 and American Legion Post 203 are sponsors of the drill team.

Man, 23, drowns in Lake Opeka

A Des Plaines man drowned early yesterday in Lake Opeka, Touhy and Lee streets.

Mark Cleveland, 23, of 2050 Pine Dr., was pronounced dead at Holy Family Hospital after his body was pulled from the lake by scuba divers.

Two fishermen saw Cleveland walk into the lake shortly before 8:30 a.m. Sunday. After seeing him surface several times and then go under, they called the Des Plaines Fire Department.

Firefighters in boats searched the lake. They were assisted by diving teams from Rosemont, Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights, according to reports.

Two professional scuba divers, Ray Rasane, Melrose Park, and Brandt Burger, Chicago, were also called into the search. Rasane, a member of the Illinois Scuba Rescue and Recovery Club, and Burger, a scuba instructor at the Park Ridge YMCA, recovered the body at 9:15 a.m. in the exact spot the fishermen said Cleveland went down.

According to Des Plaines police, the body was taken to Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, where funeral arrangements will be made. A coroner's inquest will be held sometime this week, police said, but no foul play is suspected. Cleveland was married and had no children.

Obituaries

Florence Knop

Funeral services for Mrs. Florence Knop, 72, nee Baum, a resident of Arlington Heights for about 10 years, will be held today at 10:30 a.m. in the chapel of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights. The Rev. Kurt Grotheer of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, will be officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Evergreen Park.

Mrs. Knop, who was born in Chicago, Feb. 2, 1901, died Saturday morning in Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, after a lingering illness. A past president of the Women's Auxiliary of M.O.P.U., she had been a resident of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, Arlington Heights, for four months.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Ruth (Nicholas) Derzon of Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Elaine (Dr. Frank) Post of Arlington Heights; three grandsons; two sisters, Mrs. Marjann Koranda and Mrs. Bertha Clark; three brothers, Ben, Harry and Joseph Baum; many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, Charles.

Holbe Funeral Home, Arlington Heights, is in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Deaths elsewhere

JOHN Z. RYEN, 52, of Bennett, Wis., since 1961, formerly of Elk Grove Village, died suddenly Thursday in University Hospital, Madison, Wis., after a short illness. He was born June 15, 1921, in Carroll Springs, Tex.

New 'stamps by mail' postal service ahead

"Stamps by Mail," a new postal service which will permit customers to purchase stamps and stamped envelopes by mail, will be available in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and Elk Grove Village beginning Oct. 1.

The service will be especially beneficial to shut-ins, the elderly and working people who cannot go to the post office, said Arlington Heights Postmaster Robert J. Probstle.

Customers use a special order form and envelopes for ordering stamps. The post office will accept only checks or money orders for the amount of purchase and will charge a 40 cent fee to defray the cost of two-way postage and other costs.

Leaflets with details of the new service will be distributed this week to area households and small businesses.

For further information, please call your area post office: Arlington Heights, 253-7456; Rolling Meadows, 255-8474, and Elk Grove Village, 439-5573.

Winds cause Levitz store frame to fall

High winds Friday night apparently caused the collapse of a steel-and-concrete-reinforced frame of the Levitz Furniture Store at Rohlfing Road and Northwest Highway in Rolling Meadows.

No estimate of the damage was available following the accident. The furniture store was the first Chicago area outlet for the Pennsylvania-based Levitz Co.

The building was 36 feet high and occupied 167,000 square feet of the 11-acre site. The property recently was annexed to Rolling Meadows.

Spokesmen for the store had predicted that the outlet would have sales totaling $12 million a year. A completion date had not been set for the store.

No other wind damage was reported by area police.
